

Chapter 1 : English Premier League table live / fixtures, top scorers

The Barclays Premier League fixtures for the /15 season were released today. The new season commences on August 16, and ends on May 24, The three clubs that have been promoted to.

No European football to distract them. I imagine Louis van Gaal is going to be pretty content. Here are his thoughts A home game against Liverpool begins their final three-game run in which culminates in games against West Bromwich Albion and finally Sunderland, at Stamford Bridge.. Christmas promises to be a tough time too with a visit to Old Trafford on Boxing Day. If the Magpies are in a spot of bother come the tail end of the season, they will have what should be a less than exacting run in. They start their final three games with a home game against West Bromwich Albion before heading south to Loftus Road to take on Queens Park Rangers and finishing with a home game against West Ham United. Southampton A tough start for Ronald Koeman who will take his Southampton side to Anfield where Ricky Lambert will be hoping to bite the hand that once fed him. Come the end of the season, the Saints have a run in that includes trips to Sunderland and Leicester City and a home game against Aston Villa. The season will come to a close at Manchester City. The season begins at West Bromwich Albion whilst the first home game of the season sees Manchester United head to the north east. The Swans will benefit from not being in Europe this season, but they, like others, will need to be safe before the run in which starts with an away trip to Arsenal and includes a visit of Manchester City and a final day trip to Selhurst Park. Here are who the four teams in the Champions League face after their European fixtures. His only consolation is that after three of the European games Chelsea will face one of the other Champions League sides, although that will become a big issue if one team has played the previous Tuesday and one has played on Wednesday. City then face Arsenal and Chelsea in September with their derby against bitter rivals United on November 1. Intriguingly, their final game is at home to QPR – the team they dramatically beat to win the title in Chelsea Jose Mourinho will be under more pressure to win the title this season and will kick off his quest with a trip to Championship runners-up Burnley. Three of their last four games are against United, Arsenal and Liverpool. Their derby against City at Old Trafford will be eagerly awaited on April Villa travel across the Midlands to Stoke on the opening day, followed by two home games against Newcastle and Hull. Lambert will not want any nailbiting again this season and faces a relatively easy run-in. Stoke Mark Hughes has repaired his reputation successfully at Stoke and will want to build on last season, starting his campaign at home to Villa. Irvine begins his reign with a home game against Sunderland, with the visit of former club Everton in September. If Irvine is desperate for points in the final two games, however, there could be trouble ahead with visits to United and Newcastle. Leicester Leicester have waited a decade to return to the top flight and face Everton in their opening game at the King Power Stadium. A visit to Chelsea and a home game against Arsenal follow, while United travel to the Midlands later that month. Pearson faces former club Southampton on the final day. New Manchester United manager Louis van Gaal has a far easier start to his career at Old Trafford than his predecessor David Moyes who spent the early part of last season bemoaning the gremlins in the computer system. Champions Manchester City travel to Newcastle on the opening weekend. Louis van Gaal will be able to ease himself into his new role as Manchester United manager after he was given an early boost with the release of the Premier League fixture list. Although the Dutchman is vastly experienced in Europe, he has never managed in England before and his knowledge of the Premier League will be largely superficial at this stage. United start their new era with a home game against Swansea City and a visit to Sunderland, before a trip to newly promoted Burnley and a home game against another side returning to the top flight, Queens Park Rangers. They complete a hat-trick of fixtures against sides who were in the Championship last season when they entertain Leicester City and van Gaal will hope to build crucial early momentum in contrast to his predecessor David Moyes. Here are the opening day fixtures for the Premier League season.
