Chapter 1 : Barrister's Block: Books for sale

Get this from a library! Favorite timeless patterns for today's quilter.

Two of my favorite timeless treasures have always been old houses and antique quilts. The chance to admire both, in a peaceful, charming setting is always a wonderful treat for me! The main farmhouse was built by the Fischer family in the s. Over the years, it has been lovingly restored, telling the story of this hardworking, Midwestern farm family. The original homestead was built when the Fischer family immigrated from Germany. The Milk Barn and other preserved buildings offer a glimpse of farm life between and For one glorious weekend each Spring, Fischer Farm invites quilters and quilt lovers to gather here. Over quilts were carefully hung on all of the walls throughout the farmhouse. Some of the quilts are original to the Fischer family. Many more have been shared by private collectors and local quilters for display during this show. Several of the quilts were for sale during the show. Please let me know if you can help identify any of the talented people who made these quilts! It was so delightful to slowly walk through the farmhouse admiring all of the beautifully preserved woodwork, floors, and furniture. As they carefully turned back each layer of quilts on the antique bed, they paused to tell the story of each quilt. It was so interesting to see how the styles, patterns, and colors changed over the years. Most important of all, each quilt held a story! This Embroidered Baskets quilt belonged to Esther Fischer , who grew up in this bedroom. She became a teacher and taught at the nearby, one-room Fischer Schoolhouse. Esther lived in this farmhouse until she moved in There were tears in my eyes as I heard the story of her special quilt. The soft fabrics, muted colors, and delicate stitches of antique quilts always warm my heart. Oh, the family stories, hopes, and dreams that have been thoughtfully stitched into each quilt! Although I am not a quilter, I have always had a passion for quilts. As I was growing up, I watched my mother lovingly create a beautiful quilt, block by block. I will always remember all of the love that was handstitched into her beautiful sampler quilt. I have enjoyed visiting quilt auctions, quilt shows, and quilt shops for so many years. I often think of the countless hours the quiltmakers worked designing, cutting, piecing, and quilting each treasured work of art. As I admired the timeless beauty of each quilt, I had the chance to talk with several of the talented quilters. They were all so welcoming, while sharing their passion for quilting and teaching me more about antique quilts. Although I explained that I am not a quilter, just a quilt-lover, they invited me to come to their twice-weekly gathering of quilters. As I left the farmhouse, I followed the path to the old barn, filled with antique quilts, vintage linens, fat quarters, and quilting books for sale. All of the friendly quilters continued to share more about their beloved art. To thank each of the quilters for their kindness, I shared the happy news that fabrics designed by Susan Branch are now available online. What an inspiring morning it was! Ever since the quilt show, I have been thinking about how writing a blog is a tiny bit like making a quilt. Bloggers create a handmade stitched with the warm comments of their readers, pieced together from all parts of the world, with patches of These delicate threads hold us all together through good times and bad times, sharing the present and remembering the past, always comforted with love. SimpleThymes is two years old today!! Each of you helps to piece together our stories, with warmth and loveâ€¦!

Louis looked like a fun one. Each quilt has a free pattern attached to it. My older son helped me pick the fabric placement for this one. This quilt gets to live at home with us. During the process I am pretty sure my family managed to come up with more than a dozen unique shark puns as name suggestions for the pattern. The shark teeth can be made 3D or pieced. I thought it was clever to use the pirate head print for the teeth. You can find the pattern HERE. There are 22 neutral and greyscale hues in 15 unique prints. I loved how they all played together, and the varying levels of contrast meant I could create a lot of depth and texture without adding color. The first quilt, Halo, is my favorite. The shimmering ice crystals were my inspiration for this quilt. The black spaces were calling to me. I used a deep navy thread for a subtle glow against the black fabric, and to prevent eye strain while I was quilting. I quilted a series of loops, swirls, straight lines, and circles. This quilt gets to live at Timeless headquarters in New York. Does that mean I get to say I have art hanging in New York? The second quilt, Marbled, I wanted to play with simple shapes that make a complex texture. I wanted a tile wall-inspired flow and form to the quilt. Pretty sure I succeeded with that. Next week I will showcase more Market pieces. Until next time, Happy Stitching! StaceyinStitches Welcome to my world of quilting fun! I am a quilter, pattern writer, and designer.
