How to view two-page spreads What a two-page spread is A two-page spread is a printing convention that represents leading and trailing pages in a bound or folded project such as a book, booklet, newsletter, or greeting card. Often, the pages in a two-page spread mirror one another. For example, pages 2 and 3 of this four-page newsletter make up a two-page spread. If you compare the locations of page numbers, running titles, and margins on pages 2 and 3, you can see that page 3 is a mirror image of page 2. Not all two-page spreads have a mirrored-page layout, however. In this greeting card that opens from bottom to top, the inside of the card is a two-page spread. The page sorter the control at the bottom right of the publication window that consists of page-shaped icons looks like this for both the four-page newsletter and the greeting card. In the newsletter, each page is represented by one page icon in the page sorter. In the greeting card, each surface that contains unique content is considered to be a page. Notice how the icon for pages 2 and 3 looks like facing pages. What a two-page spread is not A two-page spread is not just any two pages in a publication. In publications such as postcards and brochures that have a front and back side, the two sides are not a two-page spread. Each side has content on it, but the sides are not meant to be viewed at the same time. You can view either the front or back side of this postcard. The page sorter for a postcard looks like the following. The front and back sides of the card are each represented by a page icon. Web publications consist of a series of individual pages that cannot be viewed as two-page spreads. To find out if you are in a Web publication, look at the title bar. It displays either Print Publication or Web Publication, depending on the type of publication that you have open. On a Web site, each page stands alone. When you have a Web publication open, therefore, the Two-Page Spread option is not available on the View menu. If you just want to display two or more pages at the same time so that you can see them in relation to one another, you can do that in Print Preview. On the File menu, click Print Preview. Click the Multiple Pages button and then choose the number of pages you want to display. How do I view two-page spreads? On the View menu, select Two-Page Spread. A publication must have at least three pages in order for you to see the results of selecting Two-Page Spread. On the page sorter, click the icon for pages 2 and 3 to see a two-page spread. To switch back to viewing one page at a time, on the View menu, clear the Two-Page Spread check box. Expand your Office skills.

History. Microsoft released the first version of Publisher in Adobe's Pagemaker came out in , securing its position as a leader in the field long before Publisher.

Selecting a Booklet Page Design credit: Screenshot courtesy of Microsoft. Open a blank publication. Click the Page Design tab and then click the Size icon. Select More Preset Page Sizes at the bottom of the drop-down menu. Click the Booklets folder. Other folders contain other page sizes. Video of the Day credit: Select any booklet that suits your project. This booklet generates four pages per sheet of paper. The first and fourth page are printed on one side of the sheet, with the second and third pages on the other side so when you fold the sheet in half, the four pages can be read in order. Adding Text to the Booklet credit: Click the Insert tab and then click the Draw Text Box icon. Drag the cursor over the first page where you want the title to appear. This behavior is normal and it ensures that the text inside the text box will be aligned with the page margins. Type or paste the title in the text box. Highlight the text by dragging the cursor over every letter so you can format it. Draw text boxes on each of the other pages. Begin typing the content for the booklet in the first text box after the title or paste it from another document. When there is too much text for the box, an Overflow Indicator appears on the border. Click the Overflow Indicator and then click the next text box so the words can flow from one text box into the next. When the second text box is full, click the Overflow Indicator again to link it to the third, then link the third text box to the fourth until your four-page booklet is filled. Click the Home tab and format the text as desired. To use headings in the booklet, highlight the heading and then select a style from the Style icon in the Home ribbon. Adding Images to the Booklet credit: Add images from your computer by clicking the Insert menu and then clicking Pictures. Drag any corner of the image to resize it without distorting its aspect ratio. To move an image, just drag it to where you want it to appear. Right-click the image and click the Text Wrap icon if you need to adjust the way text wraps around the picture. By default, Text Wrap is enabled, but you can make the image appear beneath the text, over the text, or have it in-line with the text. Printing the Booklet credit: Click the File tab when you are ready to print the booklet. Select Letter-sized paper in the Settings section and then examine each page in the Preview window. Click the Arrow beneath the preview to examine other pages.

1. Start Microsoft Word or Publisher. On Publisher's Available Templates screen, click the "Programs" button. Double-click the "1/2 Letter Booklet x " button in the Blank Sizes section.

In fact, after the initial setup of most documents, navigation and functionality is extremely close, and the choice of program may be more one of preference or availability. For desktop publishing projects like setting up a book, both Word and Publisher offer quickstart templates and assistance along the way to starting your next bestseller. Start Microsoft Word or Publisher. Click "Yes" at the Automatically Insert Pages pop-up. This ensures you have the proper four-page layout. In Word, click the "File" tab, click "New" and click the "Books" file folder icon. Double-click one of the file folder icons. Double-click a template to open the book to the screen. Add a text box to the Publisher page by clicking the "Insert" tab. Click "Draw Text Box" and draw a box the size of the Publisher page. In Word, highlight the placeholder book page information with the cursor. Type the first part of the book information, such as the book title, author, publishing house and date. Add another text box, press "Enter" to move to a new line within the same text box or highlight existing text in the template and begin to type the book text, such as "Chapter 1. Click "Insert Blank Page. Insert cover art or a back cover author photo by clicking that page. Click the "Insert" tab. Drag the picture into place on the page. Repeat to add additional images to the other cover, inside covers or within the book pages if your book has illustrations. Click the "File" tab. To use the book as a template for future use, always open the file and resave it with a new name, keeping the setup template to let you start from scratch every time. Click the "Save" button.

Note: Citations are based on reference standards. However, formatting rules can vary widely between applications and fields of interest or study. The specific requirements or preferences of your reviewing publisher, classroom teacher, institution or organization should be applied.

Less Publisher is a great app for creating visually rich, professional-looking publications without investing lots of money and time in a complicated desktop publishing application. You can make simple things like greeting cards and labels, or more complex projects like yearbooks, catalogs, and professional email newsletters. The trick is to find a template that looks like the vision you have for your final publication. Publisher comes with built-in templates. Choose one of the Featured templates, and click Create. To use one of the templates installed in Publisher, choose Built-in, scroll to click the category you want, choose a template, and click Create. To find a template on Office. Save your publication Save your publication the first time by following these steps. In Save As, choose where you want to save your publication. OneDrive is a free Microsoft service that provides password-protected online file storage. Computer includes any folder on your computer. Add a Place lets you add an online location to save your publication. Enter the name for your publication, and click Save. Use the options in the Insert Pictures dialog box to find the picture you want to use. Add text to your publication Add text to your publication by inserting a text box first. Most templates contain text boxes you can fill in, but you can also add your own text boxes. Type text in the text box. If the text you type is too long for the text box, you can make the text box bigger, or link it to another text box. Link your text boxes You can link text boxes so that text flows from one box to another. When a text box has too much text, a little box with ellipses appears in the lower right of the text box. Create a new text box. Click the overflow indicator and your cursor becomes a pitcher. Move to the new text box and click. The overflow text will show up in the new text box. Now as you add text, words flow from one text box to another. If you run out of room in the second box you can link to another text box, and the text will flow through all three boxes. Add Building Blocks to your publication Building blocks are reusable pieces of content such as headings, calendars, borders, and advertisements. Publisher has built-in building blocks, or you can create your own. In the Page Navigation pane, select a page in your publication. Click a building block.
