In middle school, friendships both deepen and become more challenging. As with most things, the best way to teach kids is to make the lesson fun. A vast number of friendship games and activities for preschoolers and middle schoolers can be found online. These are some of our favorites. Preschool Friendship Activities Share on Pinterest As adults who know how difficult it can be to make friends, the ease with which preschoolers develop friendships is amazing. At this stage, friendship is more about proximity and interests: Who is around me and do they want to play the same thing I am playing? Friendship activities for preschoolers are focused on the building blocks of relationships: The Good Friend List This is a simple, straightforward activity in which children are asked to list what qualities make a good friend. The Matching Game Every child gets a marble and has to find the other kids who have the same color marble. They then link arms and stay together until all groups are complete. This is a fun way to get different kids together and to reinforce the idea that different people can have things in common. One person stands in front of the group and shares a fact about themselves, like their favorite color or favorite animal. This also gives active preschoolers a reason to get up and move around. The Compliment Game This game can be done a number of different ways. Kids can sit in a circle and toss a beanbag to each other, or they can just name the next person to get a turn. Regardless, the point is for each child to get a chance to compliment another child in their class. This teaches kids how to pay compliments, and how nice it is to receive them. It also helps a group of kids get to know each other and become closer. Middle School Friendship Activities Share on Pinterest In middle school, friendship becomes more complicated and more important. Friends become more important, typically replacing family members as confidants. Kids develop some of their first deep, intimate friends. They also struggle to be accepted, and must learn how to deal with social hierarchies and cliques. Friendship activities for middle schoolers tend to focus on teamwork and breaking down barriers between kids. Blindfolded Obstacle Game Sometimes taking the talking out of an activity makes it easier for self-conscious middle schoolers to get involved. For this activity, you put kids in small groups of three or four and blindfold one of them. The rest of the group must then guide that person through the obstacle course. You can also blindfold the entire group. In Common This game is a great activity for breaking down barriers. That group then has to find seven or whatever number you want things that they all have in common. Kids not only learn a lot about each other, but also find out that they have more in common with kids from different social groups than they thought. Face Time In Face Time, kids try to identify moods based on facial expressions. By either cutting faces out of magazines or using pictures printed out, groups need to identify what they think that person is feeling and put the faces into piles based on different emotions. The more subtle the expression, the more interesting the conversation. Children sit in a circle. The starting child picks a sentence or phrase to pass around the circle via whispers. The last child says the sentence out loud, and the whole group laughs about how much the wording may have changed. Even the simplest piece of information can get garbled and confused as it passes from person to person. This reminds kids not to believe everything they hear, and to go to the source if they want the truth. Friendship Chain Each child is given a slip of construction paper. On their paper, they write what they think is the most important quality in a friend. Those slips then get taped together to form a chain, which can be hung in the classroom and referred to throughout the year. They do everything together. They ride their bike together, play games together, and even do their chores together. Rainbow Fish is the most beautiful fish in the ocean. His iridescent scales sparkle and shimmer. The other fish ask him to play with them, but all he wants to do is show off his beauty. One day a little fish asks Rainbow Fish to share one of his scales with him, but Rainbow Fish refuses. His selfishness and greed leave him friendless and sad. A wise octopus advises the lonely fish to give away his beauty, which he reluctantly decides to do. With each scale that Rainbow Fish gives away, he grows happier and happier. Rainbow Fish learns the importance of sharing and reaps the joy from giving. After reading the story, ask children the following questions: What was so special about Rainbow Fish? Even though Rainbow Fish was the most beautiful fish in the ocean, was he the nicest? When the other fish invited him to play, how did he respond? What was most important to Rainbow Fish? Do you think the other fish liked him? Why or why not? What did Rainbow Fish learn that he needed to do so that the other fish would like him? Be a good friend, share and enjoy giving, playing together, etc. Activity Provide each child with a paper fish scale and let them decorate it. Have them write on the scale with a black marker or crayon a quality that they think a friend should have. Spread a thin layer of glue over the entire fish and sprinkle lightly with glitter. Attach all the scales to a large paper fish and display on the wall or bulletin board. Stop the music periodically and instruct children to find another child, or friend, to hug. When you stop the music, instruct children to find another child, or friend, to dance with. Start the music, have the pair hold hands, and dance together. Stop the music again and instruct each pair to find another pair, or friends, to join them. Continue playing and stopping the music until all the pairs are joined together. Provide a variety of flesh-colored crayons or markers to children and let them color their hand shapes. Write or let children write their names on their hands. Join hands together to create a large friendship wreath and display on the wall or on your bulletin board. Fishing for Friends Have children glue photos of themselves onto metal juice can lids. If desired, let child decorate lids with stickers. Attach magnets to string and the string to homemade fishing poles made of sturdy sticks that are about four to five feet long. Have children sit in a circle. Then, scatter the lids in the middle of the circle. Continue until all children have had a chance to fish. Hello, My Friend Have children form a circle. Choose one child to sit in the middle of the circle. The child who spoke gets to sit in the middle and the child in the middle gets to choose another speaker. Will You Be a Friend of Mine? Choose one child to walk around the circle as you sing the song below with children. Mary Had a Little Lamb Will you be a friend of mine? Will you be a friend of mine? Name of child who is tapped.
