A swimming pool is a great way to get your kids off the couch, away from their screens and outside where they can be active and have fun. An above ground pool is a free-standing, permanent structure that sits on level ground. An above ground pool is designed to be left up year-round. Above ground pools typically have a thin corrugated wall made of steel, along with steel top rails and upright supports. Premium above ground pools are made with resin top rails and uprights, and some are made with aluminum walls instead of steel. How to choose the right above ground pool – steel, resin or aluminum? Where you live and your climate are two important factors when choosing the type of above ground pool for your home. Premium pools made with resin top rails and uprights or aluminum walls rather than steel are designed to withstand the harshest winters. How to choose the shape of your above ground pool Above ground pools typically come in round or oval shapes. Round above ground pools are the most popular, as they have equalized water pressure at all points. This means most round above ground pools do not need an external buttress or support system. Oval pools DO require an external buttress system to provide additional structural support. Typically, these buttresses are installed along the straight sides of an oval pool, and they prevent the pool from collapsing from the uneven water pressure caused by the oval shape. What do you get when you buy an above ground pool kit? Why do we do business with these companies? Paired with its durable steel walls, Aqua Leaders double platinum and platinum rated pools are built to last and will look great in any backyard.
