Characters[edit] Ned and Alice Wakefield are the parents of a son, Steven, and identical twin daughters, Elizabeth and Jessica. Lawyer Ned Wakefield met interior designer Alice Robertson while they were at college and flower-child Alice was engaged to conservative Hank Patman. They were said to have been married for 20 years at the start of the series, so would have married in Ned is a general-practice lawyer and the head of a prominent Sweet Valley firm. Although they are quite comfortable, they do not consider themselves wealthy. He teases Jessica, but understands her more than any other member of their family. After Tricia dies of leukaemia, he dates Cara Walker. They plan to marry until she decides to move to London. During the university books, Steven moves in with Billie. He has dark-brown hair and eyes. Todd is initially romantically pursued by both Elizabeth and Jessica, but he and Elizabeth date. He is a scholar and an athlete. While Elizabeth and Jessica look alike, Elizabeth and Todd have almost identical personalities. They repeatedly break up and reunite. But Todd eventually ends up with Jessica. Todd and Jessica eventually wind up getting married and have a son, Jake. Enid is described as pretty, with curly brown hair and big green eyes. As a young teenager, Enid was a problem user of drugs and alcohol until she was involved in a bad accident; she has reformed and become a model student: She is a member of the Pi Beta sorority, but joined only to lend Elizabeth moral support. She immediately joins an elitist sorority and enters into a high-profile romance with big-shot college basketball player Mark Gathers. She also has an affair with Todd Wilkins, even falling for him and becoming dependent on him when Mark abandons her. She does patch things up with Elizabeth, but never again are they close friends. She is a beautiful former child actress and star reporter for the Oracle. Senior year sees her friendship with Elizabeth unravel as Liz makes new friends from the school merger but they eventually mend their relationship. Maria holds the distinction of class valedictorian, snatching it out from under both Liz Wakefield and Winston Egbert, who were each considered a shoo-in for the honor. One of the wealthiest people in town, she is a "poor little rich girl" stereotype. Winston Egbert, the class clown, had a major crush on Jessica, mainly during the first few books. He dates a girl named Mandy Farmer, who later moves away, and then begins dating Maria Santelli, a popular cheerleader. After a night of drunken debauchery, he falls from a balcony to an untimely death. Later a romance bloomed between her and English teacher Roger Collins. Bruce Patman is a rich, handsome snob. Considered to be a rival of the nouveau-riche Fowler family, as he and his old-money family want to preserve the town as it was when canning was the main industry. He is an avid tennis-player and race-car driver. While Elizabeth and Jessica only look alike, Jessica and Bruce actually are alike—personality-wise. He is as shallow, self-absorbed and materialistic as she is. He once dated Jessica, which ended badly as he cheated on her and made them bitter rivals. Later he dated Regina Morrow, who helped him become a bit more sincere, but after her death he fell back into his arrogant routine. Later he dated Pamela Robertson. Despite his arrogance, family means much to him and he becomes very caring toward his orphaned cousin Roger once he gets used to this formerly-poor nobody actually being his own blood. They move in together and things work out initially—until he professes to being in love with someone else She dies in the earthquake that hit Sweet Valley. Nicholas and Regina Morrow, wealthy but down-to-earth siblings and close friends of Elizabeth. Regina was deaf, but had radical surgery to restore her hearing; she dated Bruce seriously and helped change his personality for the better. Regina got in with the wrong crowd following her breakup with Bruce and experimented with drugs; she died after snorting a small amount of cocaine, which aggravated a rare heart condition. Nicholas once had romantic feelings toward Liz, but nothing came of it as she had a steady boyfriend, and they chose to remain friends. Liz helped Nicholas cope when his sister died. Amy returns in the Sweet Valley High books as a completely different character. Whilst she once shared interests with Elizabeth, such as working on the school newspaper, she returned much more like Jessica, a boy-crazy gossip. Later, she mellows and becomes enamored of Barry

Rork. Years later they are reunited married, though unhappily. Ken Matthews is a star quarterback and dater of several Sweet Valley ladies during the course of the series. In the first few books, he is called "Kenny" by his friends and teachers, though that nickname soon disappears. In Sweet Valley Confidential, he is a famous football player, husband of Lila Fowler, and - as he learns at the end of the sixth book - a father-to-be. Jessica is instantly smitten with the redhead when he moves to Sweet Valley and becomes shy and demure when he is around, acting more like Elizabeth. Eventually she relaxes enough around him to be herself, and finds that he much prefers her fun-loving, outgoing personality. Jeannie West is a cheerleader and a friend of the twins. She is best friends with Sandra Bacon. Sandra Bacon is a cheerleader who got the spot because of her friendship with Jeannie, despite her poor performance. She and Jeannie were best friends. At first she was a catty gossip, but she changed for the better with help from Elizabeth. She has an older sister named Anita. Sally Larson is a cousin of Dana Larson of the Droids, who comes to live with her family after growing up in foster homes. Susan Stewart is a friend of the twins. She is later discovered to be the daughter of a famous film director. Lois Waller is the chubby daughter of the school dietitian. She is a talented musician. She died of leukemia, like their mother. He wears "unmistakably" tight French jeans. At first hostile towards her and Jessica, due to their shared American heritage, he and Liz eventually become good friends; during her harrowing adventures in London he is her closest friend and comforter. He first appeared in the non-canonical book Spring Break, along with his mother Avery and his sister Ferney, but became part of canon whilst Liz and Jess were in London. Robin and George fell in love while taking pilot classes together. Justin Belson, is a boy who used to go out with Molly Hecht. Molly Hecht is a reformed drug addict who used to be part of a bad crowd. She hosted the party at which Regina Morrow died from doing cocaine. Her best friend was Jan Brown, who had a boyfriend named Jay Benson; and she also knew a college-aged drug dealer, Buzz Jackson, who supplied the deadly cocaine. Bill Chase is a blond surfer who briefly dated Jessica because she reminded him of his late girlfriend Julianne. After he realizes Jessica was using him, he finds true love with DeeDee Gordon. Rick Andover is the often drunk bad boy who took Jessica to a roadhouse, where she passed herself off as Elizabeth. Roger Barrett Patman is the cousin of arrogant Bruce Patman. He is more friendly and sincere than his cousin, but loyal to him. Robin Wilson is co-captain of the cheerleading squad with Jessica until she moves away. Elizabeth befriended her and tried her hardest to help her fit in. After being blackballed she lost weight, snatched the homecoming queen title from Jessica, and instantly became popular. Jessica and Robin still see each other for who they are. She maintains her friendship with Elizabeth as she was the only one who saw more to her than her former obese self. She is stopped by Elizabeth and her concerned aunt who convinced her to seek help.
