Learning to drive can be a stressful, time-consuming and financially draining experience. And it can seem daunting and overwhelming to learners. But most of us need to drive. The chances are that someone close to you owns a car, so get them to show you the key parts before your first lesson. Knowing your way around a vehicle beforehand might make it easier when your instructor comes to explain to you how to drive a car. But just be aware that if you get an automatic driving license, you will not be permitted to drive a manual car. Most people spread their driving lessons out over several months but you can also take an intensive driving course if your budget allows. If you decide to spread out your lessons, we suggest block booking them with at least one or two lessons per week for weeks in advance. Some instructors may also offer a discount for block booking. Ring around the big driving schools and local approved driving instructors and question them on their prices, qualifications, experience and track record. Word of mouth from people you trust is usually a good way of choosing an instructor. It could save you time and money in the long run. Therefore, their advice and methods on aspects such as mirror checks and speed are invaluable. Even though their advice will likely be different to what you have observed as a passenger from other drivers. Also, make sure you shop around for the best learner driver car insurance deals and check out our tips on what to look for when buying a car 7. Your instructor should give you some theory learning resources once you understand the basics of driving. It can only benefit your road knowledge and chances of passing. Whether it be stalling the vehicle under pressure or getting a manoeuvre wrong, it is important to remain calm in these situations and not to worry about what other drivers think. Just like you, they have been in exactly the same situation and should fully empathise. Some mistakes will also go unpunished on driving tests providing you rectify them and react in a safe and proper way. Practise responding in a calm way. Also book your next test right away. Leaving it too long between tests may result in you forgetting certain things and end up costing you more money on further lessons and tests. Learning to drive can be easier than you think. Hopefully these tips will help you get started. Share this article via Email Your Name:

Some learners love every moment of it, whilst others dread every second of being behind the wheel. Utilising resources such as this tutorial on how to drive a car can reduce the overall time it takes to reach test standard, therefore reducing costs. This tutorial covers the basics in terms of the legal and safety aspects and the process involved for driving a car with a manual transmission. Driving Legally In order to drive on UK public roads, a driver must be at least 17 years of age and to have physically received their provisional driving licence. To ensure you receive your licence in time for your 17th birthday, you may apply for it up to 3 months before the day you turn See learning to drive for further details. There are no age restrictions or licence requirements for individuals who have access to driving a car on private land. Certain driving schools who have access to off-public road facilities offer driving courses for individuals under See driving at 16 for information. We are all different sizes and heights, so setting up the car in order to easily reach all the controls is important in terms of safety. D doors – Check that all the doors are shut S Seat – Move the seat forwards or backwards so that you can press the clutch pedal to the floor but maintain a slight bend in your leg. S steering – Adjust the steering or the back of the seat so that you can place both hands at the top of the steering wheel but maintain a slight bend in your arms. If you can comfortably grip the top of the steering wheel, you can easily reach every other control. S seat belt – Secure your seat belt and ensure there are no twists. Ensure passengers are securely belted. M mirrors – Adjust the interior and door mirrors. For help setting up mirrors, see mirror adjustment. The cockpit drill tutorial covers all of these safety procedures in much more detail. Before You Drive The following instructions are for how to drive a manual car and are for beginners with little or zero experience. If it is your first time behind the wheel: Choose a quiet residential street. Avoid using a country road as these can in fact be dangerous, particularly for a novice driver. A road that is ideally as straight and as flat to avoid rolling as possible Start from a normal parked position on the left facing the flow of traffic. What we are going to do is to drive the car from a stationary position for a short distance and then pull up on the left, secure and park the car. Ideally you are confident with vehicle setup DSSSM and the main controls detailed within the cockpit drill tutorial. Finally, ensure your seat belt is secured, the handbrake is applied and the gear stick is in neutral see how to change gears for further information if necessary. Now, before you drive, take a look into your left door mirror; look at how parallel the car looks with the kerb and how far away the car is from the kerb. How to Drive a Car Follow this guide and learn how to drive a car 1. Starting the Car Start the car by turning the key clockwise till it stops for 1 to 2 seconds. Once you hear the engine fire up, release the ignition key. Using your left foot, press the clutch down all the way to the floor and hold it there. Select 1st Gear From neutral, using your left hand push the gear lever all the way to the left and once it stops, push it straight up into 1st gear. Now place that hand onto the handbrake lever. Gently and slowly press the accelerator pedal. You only need to press it a small amount, think roughly around 1 cm. Steady the pedal once the rev counter reaches approximately rpm. Find the Bite Point The clutch allows you to change gear, so think of the clutch as two plates that can join and separate. One plate is connected to the engine and the other is connected to the wheels. When you put the clutch down it separates the plates allowing you to change gear. You need to find the clutch bite point – the point in which the two plates begin to join and connect the engine, gears and wheels. As you lift the clutch, the plates will begin to come together and you will hear the engine change its tone and the car may creak a little. Handbrake You now need to release the handbrake. Slightly raise it and pull in the button on the end. Now release the lever all the way down and place your hand back onto the steering wheel. If your car has an electronic handbrake parking brake, there will be a button that requires pressing. Moving the Car Off Very slowly and very slightly press down on the accelerator, whilst simultaneously releasing the clutch. Shortly after the car has moved off and has gained momentum, you can fully release the clutch all the way and remove your foot from the pedal. For further information, see how to stop stalling the car. Clutch Wear Finding and using the clutch bite point is an excellent method for new drivers to move off and minimise the potential of stalling. This method does however increase clutch wear. As you progress and gain confidence in clutch control, try releasing the handbrake, increasing the accelerator and bringing up the clutch from the floor simultaneously without holding it on the bite point. This takes a little more practice, but is easier long-term and reduces clutch wear.

Driving Safety Procedures Part of the process of learning how to drive a car are safety observations and procedures. Your supervising passenger will help you initially with safety observations, but as you progress with moving off, you should include these observations:

- Mirrors Just before you move the car off, the final thing you need to do is check the mirrors. This is the internal mirror followed by the right door mirror. If there are any vehicles approaching from the rear, wait till they pass and check your mirrors again. If all clear, check the:
- Blind Spot The blind spot is the part that you cannot see in your mirrors. A cyclist or a small vehicle can easily be concealed in the blind spot, so take a look over your right shoulder to ensure all is clear.
- Look Ahead If there are any vehicles or cyclists approaching, give a right signal before moving off. If there are no road users or pedestrians that may benefit from a signal, then you may still signal if you wish, or simply not do so. This is also acceptable on a driving test. As you move off, steer half-turn of the wheel to the right and once you reach the centre of your side of the road, straighten the wheel once again.

Stopping the car We need to stop the car and park up on the left, similar to how it was before we had a drive, ensuring it is a safe, convenient and legal position. Remember the left door mirror mental photo?

Before moving back over to the left: Check the internal and left door mirror. If there are any road users or pedestrians around, signal to the left. Cover the brake and the clutch. This means place your feet on top of the pedals but do not press the pedals down. This is preparation to use the pedals and to be in the correct position when doing so. Begin to slightly steer to the left.

Making Progress That is essentially the first lesson for learning how to drive a car. Keep practicing and as you gain in confidence, increase your speed. See the changing gears tutorial for help. Below continues from the basics by pointing you to tutorials that will prove beneficial. This tutorial helps with passing parked cars.
