These letters include wonderful little fairy stories. The box also includes a Bowditch geneology book. Caroline Phelps Bullfinch ? When Caroline was only three, her mother died and the family moved to Hadley. She grew up in Boston and lived in Cambridge, later in life. Ellen is said to have owned the Phelps farm in Hadley and probably spent the summer months there, until she sold it in the s to Frederic Dan Huntington. She was very interested in the family history and was the owner of a number of family documents and objects, which were later returned to the Porter-Phelps-Huntington House. Ellen was an artist who drew many sketches of the family and the houses in Hadley. A few of these are owned by the Porter-Phelps- Huntington House museum. The others seem to have been in the possession of the Sessions family. There are three unidentified letters to her probably from her Phelps aunts. The collection contains one or two letters to each of her Huntington second cousins. There is a full folder of letters to Lilly Huntington Edward Thorton Fisher ? He was the youngest child of George and Elizabeth Huntington Fisher. These are a valuable resource, as they are letters written in 63, while he was a soldier in the Civil War. See photographs BOX She was the second child of Dan and Elizabeth Huntington. Elizabeth met her husband George Fisher on a stage coach journey to western New York. George had graduated from Brown University in He returned to Hadley to marry Elizabeth in They remained in Oswego throughout their lives. Elizabeth died there in There are letters from Elizabeth H. Fisher, George Fisher, and their children. These papers are important as the family lived in the young and prosperous port city of Oswego, New York at a time when the country was beginning to rapidly expand in that westward direction. See the photographs BOX Previous to the marriage, she was living in Amherst and working for the New England Telephone Company. Genevieve lived with Dr. Huntington in the Chaise house at "Forty Acres" and continued to reside in the apartment there after his death. She worked with him to preserve the Porter-Phelps-Huntington House as a museum, but the financial commiment to the project took a toll on her enthusiasm. Genevieve sold Beauty Counselor cosmetics from her home. Her husband died in Genevieve acted as interim curator of the Porter-Phelps-Huntington House for the summer season. In September of , she married John Valentine Ludwig Steinmetz "Val" and moved to Florida, where she was activities director of their retirement condominium. She died there in There are about 40 letters to her husband in the s and 50s. Some of this correspondence concerns early museum business. Researchers should also see the Porter-Phelps-Huntington Foundation office files, for more letters from Genevieve. See also James L. She was the second child of E. Mills and Elizabeth Quincy Huntington. She spent her first years near Boston. When she was ten, her family lived in Hong Kong for four years. Later in life, she lived on a farm in Harrison, Maine, dying there on November 27, BOX 39 of the collection contains five letters outgoing and eight incoming. Her obituary is also included. For more information see the book of her letters, Testament of Happiness, published in by her sister Elizabeth Quincy Huntington. This includes letters written to friends from her childhood in Hong Kong to her death in Maine. She was the eldest daughter of Frederic Dan and Hannah Huntington. Arria grew up in the Boston area where she was educated in private schools. In , she moved to Syracuse, New York with her parents. She continued to live there throughout her life, never marrying although she had many suitors. Arria devoted her life to work for social reforms. Her main concern was for the "fallen woman" and she worked building a shelter for homeless women and passing legislation to assist them. Arria also worked with the prison system of New York to provide separate quarters for women. Arria Huntington was also active in child welfare work and was largely responsible for the passage of the first child labor laws in New York state. Arria was also know as a writer of books and plays. She was a very successful woman and is well remembered for her contributions to the city of Syracuse. They consist mainly
