Location 9 A beautiful hotel in a nice setting. We were there at off season for the amusement park and it was quiet and relaxing. Close to many things with easy access to Seawall Blvd. Large, comfortable room which was nicely furnished. The quality of the facility is steadily going down hill. The gardens are still beautiful. The hotel is getting old and needs a face lift! Not bad but not good. Bathtub had rust spots. Carpet had a hole. You get the picture. William, United States of America It was clean. My room had a great view. I loved that room service was available 24 hours a day. The food was fantastic and the staff was friendly. Roberta, United States of America Room was clean, spacious and had a great view. Staff were friendly, courteous and helpful. James, United States of America It was very clean and everyone was very friendly. Billy, United States of America The lighting was fine. Room service was awesome we ordered breakfast we ate it all. The fresh fruit was delicious. This is an awesome place to stay. Pam, United States of America Love the beds. I had a very good experience. Evelia, United States of America Food was delicious and completely surpassed expectations! The bed was very comfortable. Edgar, United States of America We love the mattresses at the hotel. We will be there again right before Thanksgiving as we do that each year. We also enjoyed the Sunday Brunch during our stay. At check-in the lady found a great room for us on the 8th floor near the elevator. View was magnificent and the walk worked for my husband who is on a walker. Janet, United States of America The room was nice, the bed was big and cozy the view was not what I asked for but it was beautiful. Lisa, United States of America Excellent location!

Chapter 2 : Research & Ratings - Moody's

State housing manual, containing the State tenement house act, State hotel and lodging house act, State dwelling house act annotated. By: California. Commission of Immigration and Housing.

November 13, By Frank Nelson, Special to the Los Angeles Times Larry and Donna Mason smile like indulgent parents as they recount a litany of what Larry calls "unexpected architectural features" but what others might consider faults in their historic Montecito cottage: Two doors on the narrow upstairs landing open into each other. A beam at the top of the stairs is too low, as Larry knows from painful experience. Built-in shelves are set too close together for many books to stand upright. This little home "with its windows and doors of seemingly every size, its sharply slanted ceilings, its oddly shaped office" reflects a style that might best be called individualistic. Larry Mason, a retired engineer who knows something about straight lines and precise angles, puts it more bluntly: The Masons own a Moody cottage. The houses are a legacy left by four free-spirited Moody sisters. Owners of Moody cottages today dote on their whimsical homes and forgive the inconveniences that come with the eccentricities. They love the odd mish-mash of recycled house parts and adore the enchanted gardens "all part of the vision of Harriet, Mildred, Brenda and Wilma. Born in the s, the sisters pioneered a style of property development that was ahead of its time. By combining their varied training and talents, they provided a complete package: Between them they could design and engineer the cottage, arrange financing, navigate planning issues, handle real estate transactions and decorate interiors. The sisters made full use of windows, beams, doors and other house parts salvaged from large homes being torn down after the Depression to save on property taxes. These recycling efforts only lent their already fanciful creations another charmingly random dimension. Montecito Realtor Teddy Meyer of Coldwell Banker says that with the supply so limited, the cottages are "almost like a collectible" and that buyers are willing to pay extra for the charm and the cachet of history. Though he would not put a dollar figure on that premium, Meyer said prospective buyers in the area could get more house for the same money as a Moody cottage. So, what sorts of buyers opt for a Moody home? Marcia Gamble Hadley, a Seattle architect and great-niece of the Moodys, is writing a book about them. As a child, her mother spent summers with the sisters, the last of whom, Mildred, was almost when she died in Hadley is collecting early photos of the four remarkable sisters and their cottages, tracking down hand-drawn blueprints, researching construction and talking to owners. She hopes her book will answer a couple of key questions: In , they instantly fell in love with the cottage, made an offer and paid what they felt was a high price then: Christine Hoehner bought her two-bedroom, 1, square-foot Moody cottage about five years ago. And I love lots of nooks and crannies. Now retired from the title insurance business, he has lived about 30 years in what was originally the guest cottage for a larger Moody home next door. He once rented a Moody cottage for about a year. Moody cottages, Hofer says, make "the efficient house look kind of boring.
