We have appeared in major cases and all jurisdictions since and achieve only the best results. We will defend your matter aggressively and vigorously.

That is why you need us. We do our utmost to make our services accessible to all and cost effectiveness is one of the pillars of the firm. That does not affect the quality of our advice or our services, but it does require the best use of technology, excellence from each of our lawyers, and a passion for what we do. We will always carefully consider your needs, and with you we will find sustainable ways to best protect you. Saying these things is easy, living them is difficult. Ultimately you will decide whether we do. You pay us the ultimate compliment when you seek our advice. We will not let you down. The same gentleman was also a committed anti-fascist which only goes to show how complicated we all are. The firm went on to employ Tony Murphy who somehow perhaps an affirmative action appointment at the time no Irish allowed being something the firm was committed to was handed a book on etiquette on his first day at work and told he would need it! Tony has lost his book on etiquette, unfortunately, so we are left without much guidance on that score. Tony remains a consultant of the firm. Today the firm represents the new South Africa, having three young, ambitious, and energetic Directors who manage the firm. We like to commit to things in fours. Our logo has four pillars, the firm was founded by four people. Our first commitment is to provide you with innovative legal services. If you come to us, you will experience excellence. That is not negotiable, ever. The second is accountability. We will carefully consider your needs, we will advise you of your legal position frankly and we will always act only in your interests. The third is accessibility. These days it often seems everything is automated, there is little or no personal contact. That is not the Murphys way. We strive to find ways to share knowledge, to be available to you, and if you are a Murphys client you will experience that. The fourth, and last, commitment is find a way to make legal services affordable. That can only happen by beginning with a proper understanding of what is involved, what is important to you, and considering all the available options for dealing with the problems our name tells us cannot be avoided. We will do that. Only you will be able to say whether we live up to these promises. But we are confident you will experience a service, and commitment, that places us apart.

The concept may be as old as humanity. Society member Stephen Goranson has found a version of the law, not yet generalized or bearing that name, in a report by Alfred Holt at an meeting of an engineering society. It is found that anything that can go wrong at sea generally does go wrong sooner or later, so it is not to be wondered that owners prefer the safe to the scientific. Sufficient stress can hardly be laid on the advantages of simplicity. The human factor cannot be safely neglected in planning machinery. If attention is to be obtained, the engine must be such that the engineer will be disposed to attend to it. The British stage magician Nevil Maskelyne wrote in It is an experience common to all men to find that, on any special occasion, such as the production of a magical effect for the first time in public, everything that can go wrong will go wrong. Whether we must attribute this to the malignity of matter or to the total depravity of inanimate things, whether the exciting cause is hurry, worry, or what not, the fact remains. Anything that can possibly go wrong, does. The phrase was coined in adverse reaction to something Murphy said when his devices failed to perform and was eventually cast into its present form prior to a press conference some months later. The first ever of many given by Dr. John Stapp, a U. Air Force colonel and Flight Surgeon in the s. These conflicts a long running interpersonal feud were unreported until Spark researched the matter. His book expands upon and documents an original four part article published in Annals of Improbable Research AIR [10] on the controversy: From to , Stapp headed research project MX at Muroc Army Air Field later renamed Edwards Air Force Base [11] for the purpose of testing the human tolerance for g-forces during rapid deceleration. The tests used a rocket sled mounted on a railroad track with a series of hydraulic brakes at the end. Initial tests used a humanoid crash test dummy strapped to a seat on the sled, but subsequent tests were performed by Stapp, at that time an Air Force captain. During the tests, questions were raised about the accuracy of the instrumentation used to measure the g-forces Captain Stapp was experiencing. Murphy was engaged in supporting similar research using high speed centrifuges to generate g-forces. The sensors provided a zero reading; however, it became apparent that they had been installed incorrectly, with each sensor wired backwards. It was at this point that a disgusted Murphy made his pronouncement, despite being offered the time and chance to calibrate and test the sensor installation prior to the test proper, which he declined somewhat irritably, getting off on the wrong foot with the MX team. In an interview conducted by Nick Spark, George Nichols, another engineer who was present, stated that Murphy blamed the failure on his assistant after the failed test, saying, "If that guy has any way of making a mistake, he will. One is sour, the other an affirmation of the predictable being surmountable, usually by sufficient planning and redundancy. The association with the incident is by no means secure. It could be stated about like this: If anything bad can happen, it probably will. Nichols, a quality assurance manager with the Jet Propulsion Laboratory. An excerpt from the letter reads: Dawkins points out that a certain class of events may occur all the time, but are only noticed when they become a nuisance. He gives as an example aircraft noise interfering with filming. Aircraft are in the sky all the time, but are only taken note of when they cause a problem. This is a form of confirmation bias whereby the investigator seeks out evidence to confirm his already formed ideas, but does not look for evidence that contradicts them. It states that things will go wrong when Mr. Murphy is away, as in this formulation:

Since Jim opened his own practice as Murphys Law representing individuals who have been injured in accidents and who have insurance claims. For a number of years Jim was a member of the Board of Governors of the British Columbia Trial Lawyers Association, culminating in his being named President of that organization just in time to start.

Jim Murphy also has almost forty years of experience and knowledge in general civil litigation and can provide you with advice regarding a broad spectrum of problems. If you have been injured in a motor vehicle accident, you may be entitled to compensation for pain, suffering, out-of-pocket expenses, lost wages and loss of your ability to earn income in the future. If you were a driver at the time of the accident, a successful claim requires you establish that the other driver was at least partially at fault for the collision. If you were injured as a passenger, you may be required to sue the driver of the vehicle you occupied. That person may be a friend or family member, however, in most cases an insurance company will be financially responsible for the costs and conduct of the lawsuit and not your friend or family member. ICBC advertizes that you do not need a lawyer when dealing with their company and that adjusters will settle claims fairly with you on your time schedule. People mistakenly believe an insurance adjuster is looking out for their best interests when in fact the opposite is true. ICBC will not inform you of all your rights to treatment pursuant to your own contract of insurance with ICBC and will seek to minimize your treatment. ICBC will also often also unfairly blame an accident on an injured claimant in order to get out of paying them. When you are injured you are vulnerable to early settlement tactics and also less capable of finding out what your rights are and standing up for them. We can take some of the stress of this process away from you, allowing you to focus on recovering from your accident injuries. We will employ experts where necessary and help you obtain fair compensation. We provide a free half hour consultation to people looking for help within one of our practice areas. We also provide a variety of payment options for people who retain our firm, including reasonable hourly billing rates or contingency fee agreements. Our Team James J. Mission Statement My goal is to take a genuine interest in my clients, understand what they hope to achieve, and exceed those expectations. I will work hard for my clients by providing superior legal services. He is a graduate of Southaven High School and earned his undergraduate degree from the University of Mississippi with a concentration in Human Resource Management. Upon completion of his undergraduate studies, Ben was accepted to the University of Mississippi School of Law. He spent a summer semester of law school at the University of Hawaii before graduating early. My goal is to take a genuine interest in my clients, understand what they hope to achieve, and exceed those expectations. Ben is licensed to practice law in Mississippi, Tennessee, and Arkansas and has been doing so since Since beginning his practice, Ben has been a certified Guardian ad Litem whose duty is to represent the best interests of a child or incapacitated person for the purpose of legal proceedings. He is a member of the New Young Married Sunday school class, an usher, and a member of the hospitality team. Ben lives in Southaven, Mississippi with his wife and their three children. In his spare time, Ben enjoys spending time with family and friends, hunting, fishing, Ole Miss football, and cooking. Areas of Practice Including: This also includes operating driving or operating certain kinds of machinery. Besides contesting the accuracy of any allegation made against him or her in a criminal or civil proceeding, a defendant may also make allegations against the prosecutor or plaintiff or raise a defense, arguing that, even if the allegations against the defendant are true, the defendant is nevertheless not liable. In the event that you are facing or expecting criminal charges, it is important that you seek legal counsel immediately. Ben Murphy has the experience and knowledge to successfully defend your case. Otherwise known as the dissolution of marriage, it is the final termination of a marital union, canceling the legal duties and responsibilities of marriage and dissolving the bonds of matrimony between the parties. Ben Murphy can assist you in the legal process for divorce involving issues such as alimony spousal support , child custody, child support, distribution of property and division of debt. EXPUNGEMENTS In the common law legal system, an expungement proceeding is a type of lawsuit in which a first time offender of a prior criminal conviction seeks that the records of that earlier process be sealed, thereby making the records unavailable through the state or Federal repositories. If successful, the records are said to be "expunged". While most parents cooperate when it comes to sharing their children and resort to mediation to settle a dispute, not all do. For those that engage in litigation, there seem to be few limits. Court filings quickly fill with mutual accusations by one parent against the other, including sexual, physical, and emotional abuse, brain-washing, parental alienation syndrome, sabotage, and manipulation. Ben Murphy has extensive knowledge in guiding his clients through the legal process of child custody and guardianship. Child maintenance is paid directly or indirectly by an obligor to an obligee for the care and support of children of a relationship that has been terminated, or in some cases never existed. Often the obligor is a non-custodial parent. The obligee is typically a custodial parent, a caregiver, a guardian, or the state. Ben Murphy can guide you through this legal process. Sewerage District Is National Leader Milwaukee leads nation in reclaiming water, but rise in extreme rains a challenge. By Bruce Murphy - Oct 5th, Photo courtesy of MMSD. Milwaukee Metropolitan Sewerage District Executive Director Kevin Shafer was sitting high and dry, without a bit of bad news or drastic rain storms, for quite a while. Back before the Deep Tunnel was built and came on line in , Milwaukee averaged 50 to 60 overflows a year. Since then the average has been just 2. The addition of the Deep Tunnel transformed Milwaukee, making the rivers and Lake Michigan far cleaner. That figure is far higher than the 85 percent figure required by the federal government, and is the highest rate of water reclamation of any of the combined sewer and stormwater systems in the United States. Nearly every American city used combined storm and sewer until the s. And so the record stood until this year, , a freakish year of almost biblical rain storms. And more rain is coming next week. One inch of rain falling on the square-mile MMSD territory, which includes much 28 municipalities of the metro area, drops 7. The six weeks of rain during the August 20th to early September period resulted in It could result in another overflow. Shafer has been executive director since and one of the early decisions he made is to personally handle when to allow an overflow to occur. The old system automatically triggered an overflow during rainstorms when the Deep Tunnel neared the half-way-full point. Now he monitors it closely, late into the night if needed and has allowed the tunnel to fill as high as 89 percent of capacity. This remarkably hands-on style of management has resulted in fewer overflows. One segment is seven miles long extending north under the Menomonee River from the County Grounds. The other is two miles long extending under 27th St. He just does an amazing job. Shafer is now pushing all 28 municipalities to pass laws requiring new green infrastructure be installed for any new development that adds more than 5, square feet of impervious area. The City of Milwaukee, he notes, has already adopted this and other green policy initiatives. The data, he says, shows an increase in high intensity rain storms since If you think stories like this are important, become a member of Urban Milwaukee and help support real independent journalism.
