Puck control contribute towards your success as an effective ice hockey player. You should become a master of puck retrieving as well. If the opposing defence team has complete control over the puck, you will be able to add the right amount of pressure to retrieve the puck. Winning puck battles is not all about speed and strength. Effective puck control can be achieved by being explosive and strong. If you master it right, you will not have to spend endless hours on the gym, trying to build up the physical strength. Puck control has the ability to improve all your chances of winning battles in an effective manner. Learn effective puck control How can you win puck battles? As an ice hockey player, you should learn how to use your body in order to win control of the puck. What is meant here is not to out muscle or hit your opponent. Obviously, if you can do it, you will be able to get some sort of assistance. However, you need to learn how to position yourself in such a manner so that your opponent would not be able to get the puck. If you can learn it, you will be able to win almost all the puck battles that you would come across when playing ice hockey. Therefore, you just need to tweak your technique and change your mind set in order to win the puck battles. Instead, you need to learn how to position to your body between the opponent and the puck within a short period of time. In other words, you need to give a conscious effort in order to place the body between the puck and the opponent as it can contribute towards your success at the end of the day. Why learn control over the puck? This is the strategy that is being followed by the best NHL players out there in the world. They know how to eliminate the opponent effectively by getting in between the puck. When you get into an advantageous position, your opponent will have to go through the hassle of going around you in order to get the puck back. In such a situation, you can simply spread the legs a bit in order to protect the puck. In addition, it is possible for you to jam the pack against board, protect the puck with skates, bump into your opponent, stick out the butt and spin off the defender in order to gain maximum control over the puck.
