The possibilities with this are endless. You can pick any colors combinations and fill them with just about anything! This is such an easy and forgiving craft. This would be great to do with kids too! Go wild, dear reader, go wild! Plastic basket with holes in it – I found all kinds of sizes, shapes, and colors at the Dollar Store! Scrap Fabric Scissors 1. Start by collecting your fabric. Tear or cut the fabric into 1 to 1. The length of the strips can vary, depending on how many times around the basket you want each color of fabric to go. Tie your first scrap of fabric in a knot around the bottom of one of the plastic basket parts. Weave the fabric in and out of the plastic parts. When you are ready to add a new strip of scrap fabric, just tie it on to the fabric you were weaving. Continue weaving the scrap fabric in and out of the plastic basket. The basket will look best if you alternate between over and under on each plastic strip. Keep weaving, tying one fabric, and squishing until you have a basket you love! When you are done weaving, tie the scrap fabric off to the inside of the basket by making a loop in the fabric and pulling the tale through. Fill it with hair things for the bathroom, school supplies for a teacher gift, or fruit for your countertop! This is such an easy way to add the perfect touch of color to a room. Now, I made this basket for my little boy. I thought the tied knots where 2 strips of fabric were tied together looked like bows.

Chapter 2 : All-new inspiration for your scrap basket (+ giveaway!) - Stitch This! The Martingale

Do you ever feel like you had a list of fun things to make and give on those special days? They are listed under one of the following headings: I think everything will "not take that long. Who knows why but I do know that everything takes longer than I thought it would: There are projects for all folks Check out these fun coasters. Although these are really cute I can see them being made for both of my brothers depending on the fabric I would choose. The "Mini Dresden Ornament" is another project that I really loved. We all have those holiday gift exchanges in our guilds or families. I can see this being done in any number of different fabrics and given as a wonderful gift. This is one of those hand projects that you can have sitting next to your chair or in the car. By the end of the year you could probably have 4 or 5 done easily and they would be there when you needed a lovely gift. I can easily see this being made in any seasonal fabrics and used over a door handle as decoration. I carry a purse but I can think of many occasions where I just want to take a wallet and this would be perfect for those times. Just try and tell me you would not smile if someone made one of these for you given you are a Christian who celebrates Christmas of course. Recently I was at an evening baseball game and it was cold outside. Several folks had big blankets with them. How about a quilted shawl to keep you warm during those events? That certainly is more "me" than a big ole blanket. Talk about a wonderful gift What about giving someone one of these instead of a whole quilt? The projects are lovely Speaking of knowing me better than that I hope all is well in your world!
