Fitted with the alloy pistons and a modified camshaft , a DFP took several records at Brooklands in and Bentley BR2 rotary engine At the outbreak of war Bentley knew that using aluminium alloy pistons in military applications would benefit the national interest: As security considerations prevented his broadcasting the information to engine manufacturers, he contacted the official liaison between the manufacturers and the Navy. That man, Commander Wilfred Briggs , would be his senior officer throughout the war. Bentley next visited Louis Coatalen at Sunbeam , with the result that the same innovation was used in all their aero engines. Designated the BR1 , Bentley Rotary 1, the engine was fundamentally different from the Clerget except in the design of the cam mechanism, which was retained to facilitate production. A prototype was running in the early summer of The bigger BR2 followed in early They formed a group at small premises in Cricklewood to turn his aero engines business into one of car production. In a group that included Frank Burgess formerly of Humber and Harry Varley formerly of Vauxhall Motors , they set about designing a high quality sporting tourer for production under the name Bentley Motors. Migration of the Bentley family to the New World and Oceania To escape the unstable social climate in England of this time, many families boarded ships for the New World with the hope of finding land, opportunity, and greater religious and political freedom.

O, as Walter was known, always wanted to design and build his own cars. At the DFP factory, in , he noticed an aluminium paperweight and thought that aluminium might be a suitable replacement for cast iron to fabricate lighter pistons. In August , W. By December the engine was built and running. Delivery of the first cars was scheduled for June , but development took longer than estimated so the date was extended to September . They entered a modified road car driven by works driver, Douglas Hawkes , accompanied by riding mechanic, H. In , he acquired his first Bentley, a 3-litre. With this car he won numerous Brooklands races. Just a year later he acquired the Bentley business itself. Barnato had incorporated Baromans Ltd in , which existed as his finance and investment vehicle. Barnato held , of the new shares giving him control of the company and he became chairman. Barnato injected further cash into the business: With renewed financial input, W. Bentley was able to design another generation of cars. The Bentley Boys Main articles: The Bentley Boys favoured Bentley cars. Many were independently wealthy and many had a military background. Birkin overruled Bentley and put the model on the market before it was fully developed. As a result, it was unreliable. He drove against the train from Cannes to Calais , then by ferry to Dover , and finally London, travelling on public highways, and won. Barnato drove his H. Mulliner "bodied formal saloon in the race against the Blue Train. Both cars became known as the " Blue Train Bentleys "; the latter is regularly mistaken for, or erroneously referred to as being, the car that raced the Blue Train, while in fact Barnato named it in memory of his race.

Excerpt. My interest in the Bentley family arises from the fact that my wife is a Bentley, which brought me into acquaintance, many years ago, with her grandfather General Robert Bentley, and several of his brothers, all of whom were early pioneers in eastern Ohio, I.

MS - The Bentley Family Papers Introduction The Bentley Family Papers consists of over 10 linear feet of correspondence, genealogical research files, photographs, books, and artifacts relating to the Bentley and allied families. The donation and transfer of these records to the Center for Archival Collections was arranged through the cooperation of Hilda Grosh Bentley from March through July, No part of the collection may be duplicated for publication purposes without the written authorization of Mrs. Lewis Bentley, Senior, or the Bentley family heirs. Duplication is permitted for the purposes of preservation and research. Biographical Sketch The two family groups represented in this collection cover branches of the allied Lewis, Perky, and Bentley families on the paternal side, and the Chamberlain, Hascall, Grosh, and Ritchie families on the maternal. Two separate published family histories for both groups were written by Hilda Grosh Bentley and are contained in this collection; The Bentley-Lewis Story: A Journey of New Beginnings. Although the families characterized in this collection came to the United States from different countries, over a period ranging from the Colonial era to the late 19th century, all found the American Dream and were significant contributors to their communities. The Bentleys were originally from Bradford, in Yorkshire, England. Coming to the United States in , Anderton Bentley settled in Toledo, Ohio, where he found employment as a carpenter. He was joined shortly thereafter by his wife Elizabeth and daughter Ethel. The Bentley name would be associated with construction in the city for the next century, connected with such landmark buildings as the Gardner Building, the Secor Hotel, and the Odd Fellows Temple. Anderton was joined in the business just before the turn of the century by his sons, James and Thomas, and the business was incorporated as a partnership in A third generation became involved in the business in when A. Lewis Bentley and James joined their father Thomas. Two years later in , A. Bentley was married to Hilda Grosh. The Company was liquidated in , after more than a century of building Toledo. After Katherine married Thomas Bentley, she moved with him to Toledo. The Perky Family first appear in America in the late 18th century in the frontier area of Pennsylvania, with the family of Christopher and Mary Perky. One of their nine children, Christopher Jr. It was his daughter, Abigail, who married E. As a contrast, on the maternal line, the Chamberlains came to America in , settling in colonial Massachusetts. During the War of , Joshua Chamberlain was involved in the shipbuilding industry and was followed in that profession by his sons, Ebenezer Mattoon and Elbridge. Service to the country continued in the person of Joshua Lawrence Chamberlain, nephew of Ebenezer and Elbridge his father was their other brother Joshua , who gained fame during the Civil War at Gettysburg in command of the 20th Maine for his daring maneuver on Little Round Top, for which he was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor. His accomplishments were held in such high esteem in the family that one of his cousins, Mary Chamberlain Grosh, named her eldest son after him. The name was carried on in succeeding generations into the Bentley family as well. Ebenezer Mattoon Chamberlain left Main in , traveling West to Indiana, where he taught school for a short period and then studied for the bar and became a lawyer, settling in Goshen in His brother, Elbridge, joined his older brother in Goshen the following year. The family of Ebenezer and Ann resulted in eight children, including Mary Henrietta, who was born in Well educated by his family, Emil moved to Goshen, Indiana, where he worked for the hardware firm of Lawrence and Noble. In he married Mary H. Chamberlain, eventually moving from Goshen to Toledo, Ohio. Lawrence, who studied medicine at the University of Michigan and became a doctor in , married Caroline Eugenia Ritchie in Grosh began practicing medicine, as a pioneer in the specialty of diagnostician, he became associated with Toledo Hospital, where he eventually became Chief of Staff. Their first child, Hilda, was born in , followed two years later by Lawrence Chamberlain Grosh Jr. Eventually his family would grow to a total of ten. James taught school in Ogdensburg for a while, before moving to Ohio, where he began legal training. He was admitted to the bar in Toledo in Married in to Tirzah A. Foster, who died in leaving him with a 2 year old son, James married a second time in to Samantha S. Jones of Grafton, Ohio. His son from his first marriage, Byron, followed his father in the practice of law, eventually distinguishing himself by serving in Congress in , and being elected Common Pleas Judge in . His marriage to Samantha, who died in , resulted in one daughter, Ada Malinda Ritchie. James married for a third time in to Eugenia Arabella Jones, the younger sister of his second wife. The rich heritage of each of these families was brought together by Hilda Grosh Bentley, who in her investigation of her family compiled an extensive collection of material. As the firstborn child of Dr. Lawrence Chamberlain Grosh, Hilda benefited from an upbringing which included a period of living in Europe while her father pursued advanced medical studies, education in Toledo at the insistence of her aunt Ada Ritchie at the Janes-Franklin School and the Smead School for Girls, and a year of college at Smith College in Northampton, Massachusetts. Through the years, in addition to her attention to her family and the concerns of the Bentley construction business, Hilda was deeply involved in community affairs in the areas of history, historic preservation health, mental health, art, conservation, and education. Scope and Content The Bentley Family Papers consist of separate groups of research material compiled by Hilda Grosh Bentley relating to her family history. The collection has been maintained as two discrete groupings, based on the maternal and paternal lines, in the general arrangement established by Mrs. Each segment contains similar types of material, including correspondence, genealogical research files, photographs, and books. In addition to general documents and correspondence related to genealogical research on the Chamberlain-Hascall, Grosh-Ritchie families, the collection includes a nice series of personal correspondence dating back to . There are typed abstracts to these letters in the collection. Included in the literary productions among the manuscripts is the original of a sketch book or journal of Ebenezer Mattoon Chamberlain, which consists of an account of his trip to Indiana in and his early years there until , as well as an undated speech to the Fayette County Agricultural Society written from the back of the volume, inverted ; and a copy of his diary describing a return visit to his home and family in Bangor, Maine after an absence of 14 years. Miscellaneous items in the collection include a rare opalotype of Emil Grosh a photographic process where the image is on frosted glass , as well as a few striking artifacts representing the material culture of the time, which include two beaded bags, one with colored glass and the other metal beads. Some notable items included in the Bentley-Lewis portion of the collection are materials relating to Bentley Construction, including Nicholas Building construction photos from ; a series of photographs and biographical sketches of prominent Toledo businessmen, architects, and buildings, compiled by James Bentley; mementos of small prayer books and both Lewis and Bentley Family Bibles; a ledger belonging to E. Lewis; photo albums; a collection of family historical sketches; and numerous artifacts belonging to the Bentley and Lewis Families, including hair combs, shirt studs, an initial seal, and an autographed scroll.

Closing his fifth-generation family construction business was perhaps the hardest decision Thomas H. Bentley III ever made. He also says it may have been the smartest thing he ever did. Just a few years after making that tough decision, the Bentleys are preparing for transition to the sixth generation with the same clear-headed, no-nonsense attitude. Bentley World-Packaging began as stopgap business during World War II and then lay dormant from until Tom revived it in as a diversification move during an earlier construction downturn. The company serves more than major manufacturing customers, including General Electric, Westinghouse and Goodyear, and is a major player in packaging of military shipments to Iraq and Afghanistan. The company grew for more than years to become one of the largest contractors in the state, earning a reputation for high-quality construction of historical landmarks like the Villa Louis Mansion in Prairie du Chien, the Music Hall at the University of Wisconsin in Madison and the spectacular Tripoli Shrine Temple in Milwaukee. Through its five generations, the company took on notable projects across the country, from the Cincinnati Water Works to the San Francisco Post Office, which survived the earthquakes of and But then came the financial collapse of Bentley says he had to sign a personal note to his bank for a million dollars to guarantee completion of all remaining projects, pay all subcontractors and service providers, and repay all loans. He adds that the decision has paid off; the bank has repeatedly offered him financing for other ventures, he notes. At the time Tom fired it up again, the company occupied 5, square feet of shop space, operated one fork truck and had two men making boxes. Tom holds the title of CEO. Bentley World-Packaging focuses solely on packaging for overseas shipments. The company is not involved in warehousing, freight forwarding, trucking, ocean shipping, air freight or other aspects of the logistics industry. The weights and sizes given to the freight forwarder have to be right. The company leases most of its space, primarily with an option to buy. Today, ten holding companies, under the umbrella of Bentley Management Group, own properties in as many different states. Todd Bentley has devoted a good portion of his time with the company managing that portfolio, along with other duties, as he expands his role in preparation for the transition to the sixth generation. Tom tries to focus on the sales side of the business. The operations and financial matters are my focus. Officially and unofficially, the transition is happening now. Ownership is being transferred on an ad hoc basis through stock purchases based on appraised value. There is no defined plan at this point, but there is an annual process that takes place. They have higher expectations. Todd agrees with that assessment. Early on, it led to some heartache and strife until I learned when to speak my piece and when to let issues slide. I sometimes may go to him to keep him in the loop. To his credit, he was very relaxed and got to spend a lot of time with his kids. More recently, they bought another packing company serving Dayton and Cincinnati and another in Baltimore, and Tom says they expect to acquire one or two every year for the near term. Tom is keeping a wary eye on international developments. This article may not be posted online or reproduced in any form, including photocopy, without permission from the publisher.

The Bentley Motto The motto was originally a war cry or slogan. Mottoes first began to be shown with arms in the 14th and 15th centuries, but were not in general use until the 17th century. Thus the oldest coats of arms generally do not include a motto. Mottoes seldom form part of the grant of arms: Under most heraldic authorities, a motto is an optional component of the coat of arms, and can be added to or changed at will; many families have chosen not to display a motto.
