

Chapter 1 : Building bright futures in Boston Â« Coast Guard Compass

A promise to every student. Ten extraordinary summers. That's the Horizons difference. Horizons at Dedham Country Day offers a tuition-free academic enrichment summer program to students of low-income families from neighborhoods in Boston and Dedham.

It may be even brighter for the Philadelphia 76ers. It was just a few years ago that the longtime rivals both embarked on franchise rebuilds. They took much different paths, but once again find themselves ready to battle in the Eastern Conference playoff picture. Chamberlain and Bird vs. It was the summer of when Danny Ainge traded away fading superstars Kevin Garnett and Paul Pierce and stole a trio of future first-round picks from the Brooklyn Nets. He hired Brad Stevens from Butler, bringing one of the brightest college minds to the pros. He traded Jrue Holliday in the offseason and Evan Turner at the deadline, and the 76ers would win just 19 games. Injuries kept the duo from contributing much until this season, but here they are, now the darlings of the NBA. After one win season out of the playoff picture, Ainge fast-tracked his rebuild with a deadline day deal for Isaiah Thomas in After a pair of first-round exits in the playoffs, he landed free agent Al Horford and the Celtics fought their way to the Eastern Conference Finals in just the fourth year of their rebuild. All the while, they had youngsters of their own in Marcus Smart and Jaylen Brown to develop and contribute on a win-now Celtics team. Then the wild and wacky summer of happened. Ainge made sure to land the prized free agent, inking Gordon Hayward to a max contract. He swapped Thomas and his final first-round pick from the Brooklyn heist for a new face of the franchise in Kyrie Irving. The 76ers, ready to yield the benefits of the process, brought in a veteran cast of J. Redick, Jerryd Bayless and Amir Johnson to help their youngsters. The two teams shocked the league with a rare rival swap, as Boston sent the No. Fultz is currently sidelined with a bad shoulder, while a season-ending injury to Hayward has required Tatum to become an instant contributor on a contender. Everything the Celtics and 76ers have done over the last four years laid the groundwork for the rivals of NBA yesteryear to fight for Eastern Conference supremacy in the near future. Even if LeBron James remains in Cleveland, the two will be there to put up a fight, and possibly overtake his throne. The Celtics will welcome the 76ers to the TD Garden for their second clash of the season on Thursday night. The 76ers have received incredible performances from Simmons the Rookie of the Year after missing all of last season and Embiid to start , right in the middle of the East. Simmons is a rare and electric talent, a 6-foot point guard that can do pretty much anything and make it all look incredible easy. The Celtics got the best of the 76ers in their first matchup of the season, bouncing back from a frustrating first half after Irving so eloquently told a Philadelphia fan to shut his yapper. It was their first win of the season and the beginning of a game win streak by Boston. They have Embiid, Simmons, a lot of great players over there. The future is very bright for them. The younger guys are coming in and stepping up, playing at a high level. It gets you excited when you think about it.

Chapter 2 : DVIDS - News - Building Bright Futures in Boston

Bright Futures Adoption Center is a licensed, non-profit, domestic Massachusetts adoption agency dedicated to helping children and families succeed. Pregnant and Considering Adoption? Bright Futures understands that this step, if you choose to take it, will be one of the most difficult and life-changing things that you will ever do.

But what does it take to secure their best interests? Will sending them to the finest schools prepare them well? Or is it all about the environment? Move to a Good Neighborhood A good neighborhood can offer a lot of advantages. From accessibility to security, the right location can mean a better lifestyle and peace of mind. But what makes a good location? Life in Metro Manila can be stressful, with traffic and population density. So moving to nearby provinces, like Cavite, could be a good decision for your family. Community developments in the National Capital Region NCR feature multiple amenities that make neighborhoods practically self-sufficient. These amenities include a clubhouse, a commercial district, and a transportation hub, among others. When choosing your new neighborhood, consider access to a business hub. A relocation would be ideal if you have a new job that allows for a shorter commute. This way, you can spend more time with the family and keep a closer eye on the kids. A good school can offer adequate preparation for what your child wants to achieve as an adult. A community with more families would also be suitable because this would give your children the opportunity to play with other kids. Socialization is beneficial for their development. Manage the Stress Happy parents have happy kids , and this is backed by research. Children absorb what they see in you and your spouse. Your relationship with your child matters because the way you treat them will have a lasting impact, this is according to research from husband-and-wife psychologists Carolyn Pape Cowan and Philip Cowan. So you need to work on managing the stress and maintaining a sunny disposition. About 15 percent of what happens to kids can be attributed to what parents have done Your marriage contributes to about 15 percent of how the child turns out to be The history of the family contributes to 15 percent of what the child becomes in the future The bottom line is emotions are contagious. After all, your kid highly depends on your stable well-being. You always want the best for your children. You especially want to see them on the right path, headed toward a successful future. Achieving your intentions for their lives means providing them with the right environment.
