At present to work as a nurse only holding accredited academic degree is sufficient, but there are programs for nurses to take RN examination after graduation. Also, upon the approval and execution of continuous educational act, the Iranian nurses should obtain score of 15 every year in various educational courses held by the Ministry of Health of Universities, Scientific Associations and Nursing organization.

Nursing in the United Kingdom To practice lawfully as a registered nurse in the United Kingdom, the practitioner must hold a current and valid registration with the Nursing and Midwifery Council. The title "Registered Nurse" can only be granted to those holding such registration. Second-level nurse training is no longer provided; however, they are still legally able to practice in the United Kingdom as a registered nurse. Many have now either retired or undertaken conversion courses to become first-level nurses. They often perform roles similar to those of physicians and physician assistants. Most NPs have referral and admission rights to hospital specialties. They commonly work in primary care e. In the UK, the title "nurse practitioner" is legally protected. Specialist community public health nurses – traditionally district nurses and health visitors , this group of research and publication activities. Lecturer-practitioners also called practice education facilitators – these nurses work both in the NHS, and in universities. They typically work for 2–3 days per week in each setting. In university, they train pre-registration student nurses see below , and often teach on specialist courses for post-registration nurses Lecturers – these nurses are not employed by the NHS. Instead they work full-time in universities, both teaching and performing research. Managers[ edit ] Many nurses who have worked in clinical settings for a long time choose to leave clinical nursing and join the ranks of the NHS management. This used to be seen as a natural career progression for those who had reached ward management positions, however with the advent of specialist nursing roles see above , this has become a less attractive option. Nonetheless, many nurses fill positions in the senior management structure of NHS organizations, some even as board members. Others choose to stay a little closer to their clinical roots by becoming clinical nurse managers or modern matrons. Pre-registration[ edit ] To become a registered nurse, one must complete a program recognised by the Nursing and Midwifery Council NMC. Currently, this involves completing a degree , available from a range of universities offering these courses , in the chosen branch specialty see below , leading to both an academic award and professional registration as a 1st level registered nurse. The first year is known as the common foundation program CFP , and teaches the basic knowledge and skills required of all nurses. Skills included in the CFP may include communication, taking observations, administering medication and providing personal care to patients. As of , the Nursing and Midwifery Council will require all new nurses qualifying in the UK to hold a degree qualification. Midwifery training is similar in length and structure, but is sufficiently different that it is not considered a branch of nursing. There are shortened 18 month programs to allow nurses already qualified in the adult branch to hold dual registration as a nurse and a midwife. Shortened courses lasting 2 years also exist for graduates of other disciplines to train as nurses. This is achieved by more intense study and a shortening of the common foundation program. Before Project , nurse education was the responsibility of hospitals and was not based in universities; hence many nurses who qualified prior to these reforms do not hold an academic award. Post-registration[ edit ] After the point of initial registration, there is an expectation that all qualified nurses will continue to update their skills and knowledge. The Nursing and Midwifery Council insists on a minimum of 35 hours of education every three years, as part of its post registration education and practice PREP requirements. Cannulation , venipuncture , intravenous drug therapy and male catheterization are the most common, although there are many others such as advanced life support , which some nurses undertake. Many nurses who qualified with a diploma choose to upgrade their qualification to a degree by studying part-time. Many nurses prefer this option to gaining a degree initially, as there is often an opportunity to study in a specialist field as a part of this upgrading. District nurses and health visitors are also considered specialist nurses, and to become such they must undertake specialist training. This is a one-year full-time degree. Many of these and other nurses will also undertake training in independent and supplementary prescribing, which allows them as of 1 May to prescribe almost any drug in the British National Formulary. This has been the cause of a great deal of debate in both medical and nursing circles.

The nurse consented to follow these suggestions, the more readily as they offered her the means of securing herself against any worse consequences than the loss of her place, by remaining in the Asylum, and so maintaining the appearance of innocence, at least.

Enrolled nurse EN Professional titles The professional courtesy title "sister" has fallen into disuse and disapproval, even though it was formerly used by both male and female registered general nurses. The title "nurse" was used when addressing enrolled nurses. The term "matron" is inadvisable. In keeping with the relaxed attitude to formalities in Australia, most nurses are happy to be addressed by their first name and describe themselves either as "an RN" or "an EN". In Victoria, an enrolled nurse will commonly describe themselves as a "Div. Nurse practitioners Nurse practitioners are being introduced into the Australian healthcare community, with Victoria having had nurse practitioners since In some instances, it could be argued that this is as a natural professional evolution and recognition of the outstanding clinical expertise some nurses have attained over the course of their careers in areas such as wound management. Many practicing nurses are still college graduates, but those entering nursing now are required or encouraged to enter at the university level. Types of nurses Registered nurse RN. Legal regulation The profession of nursing is regulated at the provincial and territorial level in keeping with the principles of professional regulation endorsed by the International Council of Nurses. In the western provinces, psychiatric nurses are governed by distinct legislation. All registered nurses and nurse practitioners in the province of Alberta are expected to maintain their clinical competence in order receive an annual practice permit from the College and Association of Registered Nurses of Alberta which also sets standards for scope of practice and provides practice support. India The Indian Nursing Council is the regulatory body for profession of nursing. A person practising nursing must be registered with the nursing council. For a person to be registered, he or she has to undergo and pass the prescribed course stipulated by the council. Ireland Nursing is self regulated in Ireland. The board was established under the Nurses Act and currently operates under the Nurses Act. Developments Significant changes have occurred in Irish nursing since the publication of Report of The Commission on Nursing, A blueprint for the future. Nurse education Pre-registration nurse education in university and college based. All pre-registration programmes are at degree level NQAI level 8. Significant developments have occurred in post registration nurse education with a variety of programmes available to nurses to support their practice and develop their career. New Zealand History New Zealand originally had nurse education as a part of the hospital system, but, as early as the s, post registration and post graduate programs of study for nurses were in existence. Reforms in the s disestablished the original hospital-based schools and moved these into the tertiary education sector, namely polytechnics and universities. Within the hospital system were an array of titles and levels, which often focused upon clinical specialty rather than generic nursing knowledge. All current students graduate as a registered comprehensive nurse. Legislation exists keeping the number of schools to no more than 21, although some schools run courses in more than one geographical location. Recently, attempts were made to reintroduce the title enrolled nurse with this causing some disagreement between trade union s, the registering body, and health providers. Legal regulation All nurses in New Zealand are expected to maintain both professional knowledge and clinical competence in order to receive an annual practicing certificate from the Nursing Council of New Zealand NCNZ. Recent legislation the Health Practitioners Competency Assurance Act sets standards for both scope of practice and requirements in terms of ongoing development.. Similarly the NCNZ caused minor controversy when they gave the title nurse practitioner trade mark status, thus preventing those with the title from using it. In order to become a nurse practitioner, the nurse must undertake an approved course of study and present a portfolio of evidence to NCNZ for approval. Ongoing issues New Zealand has historically provided many nurses for the global market place; the salaries in overseas countries notably Australia , USA , United Kingdom and the Middle East have proved attractive to NZ nurses. This has resulted in a drop in the number of NZ-educated nurses practicing within New Zealand; recently the flow has been decreased by a substantial pay award for hospital based nurses. This pay award was given to those employed within district health boards but not other public sector providers which caused a degree of conflict within the profession and a return to hospital practice for many in the primary healthcare sector. Legal regulation The Professional Regulation Commission oversees the licensing of registered nurses as authorized by the Philippine Nursing Act of 1974. The board inspects nursing schools, conducts licensure examinations, issues and monitors certificates of licensure, promulgates a code of ethics, participates in recognizing nursing specialty organizations, and prescribes guidelines and regulations governing the profession under the Nursing Act. Education In order to be examined to practice as an enrolled nurse, students must complete a two-year academic course which includes 2,000 hours of clinical practice. Subjects studied in the first year include: Nursing history and ethics.

Article Featured The word "nurse" has a different definition to each person. In this article, I researched where the word "nurse" came from and went in-depth to what the word "nurse" meant to me. The word "nurse" is derived from the Latin word nutrire which means "to nourish". The French term nourrice is also referred to a woman who suckled a child. The term was first used in English in the 13th century. As time went on other dimensions were added to its meaning throughout the evolution of the word. By the 16th century the meanings of a "nurse" included "a woman who waits upon or tends to the sick. She is one of the most honored women in American history, not only because of her great deeds and service but also because of her nursing skills that saved lives. Clara was born in and was the daughter of Captain Stephen Barton, a member of the local militia and a politician Wikipedia. As Clara grew up she spent most of her time playing with her brother and male cousins. At the age of ten, Clara assigned herself to her first task of nursing. Her brother David fell from the roof of a barn and received a severe injury. She learned how to distribute the prescribed medication to her brother, as well as how to place leeches on his body to bleed him. She continued to care for David long after doctors had given up. Miraculously, David made a full recovery and lived. Her father convinced her that it was her duty as a Christian to help the soldiers. In the August of , Barton finally gained permission from Quartermaster Rucker to work on the front lines to help wounded soldiers. In she was appointed by Union General Benjamin Butler as the "lady in charge" of the hospitals at the front of the Army of the James Wikipedia. Nurses serve in all branches of the military, including the battlefield. Nurses can also be employed in unusual places like oil and gas refineries, correction facilities or prisons, Native American reservations and schools including universities. If a nurse needs a change of scenery, nurses can even take jobs at summer specialty camps. Usually these occur over the summer break and are for kids with chronic illnesses such as diabetes or muscular dystrophy. Many times these camps often provide housing for the nurse and her family for the summer. Travel nurses serve in positions that are hard to fill usually due to the location and remoteness of the area. These nurses fill the void for a few months at a time before being given a break and then being assigned to another location Not only can nurses work in a variety of places, they can also work at a variety of jobs within nursing. Many nurses select specialty careers in hospitals such as a labor and delivery nurse, a neonatal or newborn nurse, or a surgical nurse, but more than half of nurses do something other than hospital staff nursing. Nurses have taken jobs in medical equipment and supply manufacturing. Flight nursing cares for patients while they are being moved via helicopter or plane. Forensic nursing cares for and supports victims of sexual abuse or violent crimes. This nurse not only collects evidence for a pending court case but also serves as a great support for the victims following the critical hours after the crime. Nurses also have become educators as they train not only the next generation of nurses but also instruct many patients in the care of their chronic disease such as diabetes. Nurses can be found editing medical journals and books or working in drug treatment centers. Legal nurses are paid by lawyers to give advice about medical details in court cases. And finally there are even "Wall Street Nurses" who mediate and underwrite securities for investments. A wise author named Dr.
