Chapter 3 : Robert Schoonmaker Obituary - Machesney Park, IL

The Schoonmaker family: descendants of Hendrick Jochemsz Schoonmaker, , Parts Genealogy and local history The Schoonmaker Family: Descendants of Hendrick Jochemsz Schoonmaker, , Ruth P. Heidgerd.

Hugo Freer was one of the original Patentees of the settlement, with Hendrick Jochemsz coming to the area a little later, in about 1683. The Freer House on Huguenot Street holds the Schoonmaker Library, the Schoonmaker Family Association having affiliated with Huguenot Street in the 1930s and deciding to work on a project to benefit as many people as possible. The history of the family was written in multiple parts over a number of years by Ruth Heidgerd: Descendants of Hendrick Jochemsz Schoonmaker, Ruth Heidgerd also did the research for The Freer Family: This document relies on those printed histories, as well as the documentation in the website for the Freer-Low Family Association <http://www.freer-low.com/>. It also indicates that he was a baptismal sponsor for a child of Jean Hasbrouck while his second wife, Jeanne was a sponsor to a child of Martin DuBois in 1683, his first wife, Maria de la Haye died in 1683 of the plague. From the Wikipedia article on Huguenots: By the end of the 17th century and into the 18th century, roughly 300,000 Huguenots had fled France during a series of religious persecutions. In we first hear of Hendrick in the court records of Fort Orange Albany the first of numerous mentions of his name in court records! More humorous was the mention of his smuggling in a half barrel of beer. He was excused this time, but told not to repeat the offense. He apparently was an inkeeper because he was later found guilty of entertaining in his inn on a Sunday. Hendrick was also politically active with mention of him in various proceedings, including one where he, as a lieutenant of the burgher guard accompanied a Maqua Indian who was showing the guard how his colleagues had obtained brandy illegally at a house in 1683. Because of troubles like this with the Indians, the settlement at Wiltwyck Kingston asked for help to build a stockade and Hendrick assisted. The massacre occurred on 7 June when Hendrick was twice wounded. By 15 September peace had been regained and land at New Paltz was purchased from the Indians, with Hendrick being one of the original signers of the deed. An interesting and more detailed account of some of the Indian troubles is at <http://www.wiltwyck.com/>. Hendrick held various offices and continued to be mentioned in court records. The first part of the Schoonmaker history has much more information in narrative form that makes interesting reading: So, as of 1683, both men were in the area around New Paltz, Hugo Freer, one of the original patentees of New Paltz, and Hendrick Jochemsz Schoonmaker as an earlier settler buying land nearby. From the Schoonmaker history: During his captivity he suffered from the brutality of the Indians who amused themselves by throwing burning coals and ashes from their pipes upon his head, thereby scarring it in many places so it was his practice always thereafter to wear a red stocking cap. He became one of the original trustees of the Rochester Patent issued by Queen Anne. That patent is reproduced in its entirety in the Schoonmaker history, pages 10-11 from the lds website listed above. Hendrick had 6 children, Jochem about being the oldest, then Egbert, Engeltje, Volckerte, Hendrick Hendrick and Hillitje. Our line, however, stems not from Jochem, the eldest, but from Hendrick Hendrick Schoonmaker. He married Geertruye De Witt on 24 March and they proceeded to have 14 children, including our ancestor, Johannes Hendricks Schoonmaker. Johannes married Aryantje van Hoghteling and they had 7 children: Petrus Johannes is our ancestor. Our line comes from Petrus, one of the children that did not marry a Freer. He married Elsie Terwilliger, and they had 9 children, including John P. He married Mary Auchmoody and they had 6 children. Mary Catherine, born in 1683 married Andrew Keator. And there we are with the Schoonmaker line. At the beginning of this chapter Hugo Freer the patentee was introduced. They had 3 children together and with his second wife there were 8 more children, some born in Germany, others in America. His son Hugo, born in 1683 would have been about 10 years ago when he arrived in New Amsterdam. They had 15 children, including our ancestor, Hugo Freer Jr. This Hugo married Hester Deyo 9 children and their son Benjamin, who married Elizabeth Winfield had only 3 children, including another Hugo.

Hendrick Jochemsz (ca) emigrated from Hamburg, Germany to The Netherlands, and from there to Albany, New York, where he married widow Elsie Janse (VanBreestede) VanAlcmaer. His children used the surname Hendricksz, and his grandchildren used the surname Schoon- maker. Descendants lived.

But, was Hendrick Dutch, German, or even Danish. cursory examination of the spelling of names in the Schoonmaker family leads to appreciation of possible Danish origin. In Hendrick immigrated to New Amsterdam. As the son of merchants, it was possible for Hendrick to have booked passage to the New World without having migrated to Holland. In at Fort Orange Albany Dist. Hendrick and Elsie settled purchased property and settled initially at Ft. Orange where he operated an inn. In when the Wiltwyck settlement south of Ft. Orange was threatened by Indians, Hendrick volunteered for service, eventually selling his holdings at Ft. And, the Esopus volunteers were granted land as payment for service. In May of the Esopus militia was organized with Hendrick as Lieutenant. And, they would be needed. Without notice, the Esopus Indians had infiltrated the stockade by twos and threes. When on command, a general melee ensued. Hendrick, who had been standing at the gate, ran first to his house to protect his family. Being severely wounded, Hendrick and others continued the fight amongst the houses until reinforcements arrived.. In the end, with the aid of cannons, the savages were cleared from the stockade. In the days and weeks immediately following, the Esopus Militia, in the company of additional reinforcements from New Amsterdam, scoured the countryside all the way up Rondout Kill to Wawarsink where they stormed the Indian fortifications and most of the hostages were freed. But most importantly, the military might of the Esopus Indians had been destroyed, and the survivors were scattered among the many Indian villages of the Hudson Valley. Eventually, the Dutch communities would come under English administrative control. But, this was not very popular with the folks at Esopus. Barent was severely beaten for defending himself and his family from a detachment of British soldiers who had entered his brewhouse and harassed his family. In April during hearings on the "Esopus Mutiny," Captain Broadhead admitted his actions and was suspended from his command for disobeying the orders issued by the British governor of New York forbidding harassment of Dutch citizens. Also, Albert Heymans, Roosa, and others were found guilty of a "rebellious and mutinous riot" and were taken to New York City for sentencing. Eventually, the inhabitants of Kingston began to assimilate into the new English culture. When not fighting Indians or taking shifts of guard duty, Hendrick was both an innkeeper and a farmer. Immigrated to Ft.
