

Chapter 1 : Southern California Library Literacy Network: April

Note: Citations are based on reference standards. However, formatting rules can vary widely between applications and fields of interest or study. The specific requirements or preferences of your reviewing publisher, classroom teacher, institution or organization should be applied.

Reception of the Old Nineteenth. The gallant members of the Old Nineteenth arrived in this city at 4 p. Fathers, mothers, brothers and sisters, sweethearts, wives and friends were there, densely crowded together in waiting for the anxiously expected arrival. Barber, Captain Thomas acting 1st Lieut. White, in continental uniform. Their escort formed a prominent and satisfactory feature of the occasion, doing honor to their drill and efficiency as citizen soldiery, and reflected credit upon the gentlemen who perfected them in tactics. Flags were flying in every part of the city, and every proprietor of the bunting displayed it. Decorations of welcoming significance were displayed at various points along the route of procession, and the firing of artillery mingled with the hearty cheers of citizens and soldiers. As the sound of the approaching train was heard in the distance, a loud murmur of congratulation filled the building, and when the cars entered the depot a deafening burst of cheers greeted the ears of their inmates with the first token of their hearty welcome. Nearly an hour elapsed in the bustle and confusion of greeting, as the loved ones met in a fraternal embrace or rousing hand-grip, and at length the line of march was formed, through much exertion in separating the soldiers from their friends, and the regiment, escorted by our military companies and Fire Department, and led by the band of the 19th, marched to Genessee st. I am charged with the pleasing duty in behalf of the citizens of Auburn, of welcoming your safe return from the service of the country. In their name, therefore, I bid you a hearty welcome to Auburn. It is now more than two years since you left us, amidst the booming of cannon and waving of flags, the honored representatives of the righteous indignation of the people, whose feelings our flag at Sumter. But you waited not for the approach of imminent danger. You knew only that the old flag had been fired upon by organized treason, and you promptly took your lives in your hands and went forth to avenge the insult and vindicate the national honor. Theretofore the flag had been the symbol of the power, greatness and unity of the nation, and wherever it waved on sea or land, the humblest citizen was secure under its protecting folds. It is the course of history: You left us two years since with blessings on our lips and good wishes in our hearts. Those blessings are still fresh on our lips—those wishes still warm in our hearts; and the citizens of Auburn hearing of your arrival in New York had convened at the Court House for the purpose of initiating the necessary proceedings to extend to you a reception worthy of the occasion. The Common Council to carry out the universal wish of our citizens, had made the necessary appropriation to ensure you the welcome you so richly deserve. Knapp then briefly explained the various proceedings which had been made to provide for a suitable reception, read the resolutions adopted at the meeting at the Court House, and proceeded as follows: Pursuing the same strategy with us that you practiced with the rebels at Whitehall, at Kingston and at Goldsboro, you were upon us before we were prepared to receive you! You will accept these good intentions in place of the pomp and display that would otherwise have greeted your return. Your regimental colors which I see before me, worn and soiled with the smoke and dust of battle, and rent with traitor bullets, bespeak more eloquently than human voice can express, the hearty welcome that you will always deserve from your grateful countrymen. Officers and soldiers of the old Nineteenth, it is sad indeed on your return to miss the familiar faces of many of your brave comrades who have fallen in battle and by disease. I can only express for them our love while living, and mourn them dead; while to you and to all of us there remains the proud reflection that they gave their lives to the noblest cause that ever claimed a martyr. Time, with his sickle, has been busy in your absence here as elsewhere, and the green mounds in our cemeteries will explain to you the vacant places you will find around your own hearth-stones. I can only offer you in this behalf, our profoundest sympathy, and the assurance of our earnest prayer that the evening may bind up, with a soft bandage, your morning of pain. After two years of toil and hardship endured in defence of the most sacred trust ever committed [sic] to a free people, and of the best government the sun in all his course shines upon, you have returned to hear, as I know you will be glad to learn, of the unconquerable resolution, and the invincible determination of this great people never to lay down the sword until the American flag waves over every inch of American soil. When this grand result shall have been attained by your efforts and, those of such as you, this great nation, purified by its trials and by its sacrifices, and regenerated by its baptism of blood, shall rise, nobler and grander far than statesman ever thought or poet ever dreamed. Officers and soldiers of the Old Nineteenth: Again I bid you a hearty welcome to Auburn, to your homes, your friends, your neighbors and your kindred, whose warm grasp and kindling love will express to you more strongly than I can in words, the warm welcome that is in all our hearts. Stewart replied, in behalf of the 19th, in eloquent terms, expressing their gratitude at the warm and hearty welcome. Cheers upon cheers were given at the close of the address, for the officers of the Regiment, winding up with three unearthly groans for the Copperheads, and the regiment were then marched to South street, under the escort of the Militia and Firemen, where they were dismissed. Stewart, with the staff represented by Maj. Giles and Surgeon Dimon, presented an imposing appearance, their bronzed faces and soldierly bearing betokening their long and gallant service, as they marched through the closely packed crowds of enthusiastic welcomers. The following list comprises the officers and number of men returned permanently: Fuller, Acting Adjutant, Lieut. Sherwood, unassigned to Company. White, 73 men, Lieuts. Gavigan, 55 men, Lieuts. Boyle, Brannack, and Dwyer. John Wall, 80 men, Lieuts. This banner was presented at Elmira by our ladies, just before the 19th left for the seat of war two years ago. It is a glorious souvenir of the past, in which its supporters have done themselves a never dying honor. Foster was issued just previous to the departure of the Regiment from his Department: The Commanding General hopes that after a brief enjoyment of home, the memory of the brave deeds in which they have participated in this Department, and the memory of their friends left behind, will induce many or all of those officers and men, to re-enlist and return again to the Department of North Carolina. There are few among the parting who cannot recall with pride the siege of Fort Macon, the affair of Rawles Mills, and the action of Kingston, Whitehall, Goldsboro and Washington. The Commanding General sympathizes with the companions and families of those brave men who have fallen and whose memory will ever remain recorded in the annals of this Department. By command of Maj. The Sergeant, who is spoken of as a Christian and a gentleman, was returning from church with a couple of ladies when he was attacked. The murderers are in jail, and the Sergeant was buried with military honors. They look remarkably well, are in fine spirits. They were stationed at Newbern. The citizens of Auburn are to give the 19th Regiment a public reception today. You may notice that the numbers in each of these companies were small. This was for want of shoes—many of our men being now entirely barefoot. Clark, formerly of the 19th Cayuga regiment, who has been under arrest for some months, and has finally been succeeded in command by Major J. Ledlie, has been appointed to a place on Gen. Ledlie, of the 19th Cayuga Regiment, has engaged a brass band for his regiment, at Syracuse. The Cayuga regiment leaves for Washington at nine A. An immense concourse of people witnessed the departure. The wildest enthusiasm prevailed. We arrived here last night, after two days hard marching, from Berlin, Md. The health of the regiment is generally good. The boys deserve great credit for their perseverance and cheerfulness under such forced marches and privations. He saw a great smoke arising from the same point, and thinks it was caused by the burning of a warehouse on this side of the river. Rumors are current that General Stone will shortly lead our advance across the Potomac. The force under his command has been strengthened largely of late. Myers, of the New York Nineteenth, was recently tried and sentenced to be shot, for desertion, by the General Court Martial; but from the evidence it appeared that he was on his return to his regiment when arrested, and that he was overtaken by liquor, causing him to be absent longer than his permit allowed. The members of the Court therefore unanimously recommended him to mercy. Upon his solemn promise never to drink any intoxicating liquors, General Banks commuted the sentence into a forfeiture of five dollars per month of his pay for one year, and the gratified culprit was yesterday returned to his regiment. An unconfirmed rumor was circulated yesterday that the rebels had fired into and sunk a canal boat, conveying heavy baggage for a brigade stationed on the Upper Potomac. The enemy are known to have a largely augmented force in the vicinity of Leesburg, but military authorities are of the opinion that it is only a feint, and that on the first demonstration by our forces they will fall back upon the Manassas Gap Railroad, and then go down to the Junction. No apprehension is felt of any attempt on their part to cross the river, or make any serious attack upon us at long range over the Potomac. There is not a word of truth in the statement of the assassination of Colonel Knipe, of the Pennsylvania Forty-sixth regiment, or the attempted murder, or execution of the murderer Lanahan. The rebel encampments at Leesburg have been moved back some distance from the river. They were turned over to General Banks for a further examination. Considerable delight was experienced to-day in the camp of the Nineteenth New York regiment by the return to duty of over one hundred of its recusant members, including all the company of Captain Stevens. More are expected to return to-morrow. It is but justice to state that all the commissioned officers, and all but one or two of the sergeants, remained loyal from the first appearance of the defection, and it is mainly attributable to the endeavors of the former, coupled with the arguments of Major Ledlie, that so many have returned to their loyalty. All letters for this division are now forwarded to Frederick, and brought hither by a government express. The health of the troops has greatly improved since occupying their new encampment. Many of the invalids at Frederick will shortly be restored to the ranks. Speech of Secretary Seward. From the Auburn Daily Advertiser, May 29th. Ledlie, where they were formed in line under Col. Stewart, commanding, presenting a gallant and martial appearance, arrayed in line at open order, and going through a partial dress parade. Their excellent band, led by Mr. Parmalee, gave some beautiful airs, and crowds of people thronged the vicinity. At the close of the parade, Hon. Seward addressed the veterans of the Nineteenth in a few brief and touching remarks, and, after marching up Genesee street, the regiment passed in review, each company paying him a salute as they passed the platform, the officers presenting arms, and the colors dipping in honor of the staunch Statesman who had just welcomed them so nobly and thanked them so deservedly in behalf of their homes and their country. The following are Gov. I looked with pride at that flag of yours when as yet it exhibited not a single wrinkle and its colors were fresh and bright. I regard it now with a thousand times more of pride and satisfaction when I see it worn, dimmed and torn, but bearing in legible inscriptions between its stripes, the names of fields, bravely contested and nobly won. Soldiers, citizens, a nation, though composed of many individual members, is in sight of God and of mankind one aggregate, thinking, reasoning, moral, responsible person. As such aggregate persons, nations are subject to the same accidents, passions, dangers and responsibilities as individual men. Troubles, dangers, calamities, disasters and death are appointed to individuals by an All-wise Providence; and the same Providence appoints them equally for the experience of nations. As no man ever yet lived who was exempt from trouble, contention and strife,--so no nation that has ever existed, or ever will exist, has escaped, or can, altogether, the evils of strife and contention abroad and at home.

Chapter 2 : Physiological Sciences | Graduate Interdisciplinary Programs

Preservice training for instructors of adults / Phyllis A. Caldwell --Graduate degree programs for professional adult educators / Roy J. Ingham, Gardner Hanks --Training part-time instructional staff / Donald W. Mocker, Elizabeth Noble --Training paraprofessional instructors of adults / Bettie Lee Yerka --Training volunteers / Stephen H. Confer.

Program Bylaws Preamble The interdisciplinary Physiological Sciences Program is composed of research and graduate educational activities in a broad range of Physiological areas. The structure and organization of the Committee on Physiological Sciences shall conform to the Guidelines for Interdisciplinary Programs established by the Director of Graduate Interdisciplinary Programs. It is the responsibility of the Physiological Sciences Program to provide a graduate educational program in the various areas of physiology, to publicize the program, and to maintain graduate and postdoctoral participants of the highest quality. It is also the responsibility of the program to maintain vigorous, productive research activities, to maintain an interacting community of physiological scientists by providing seminars and promoting campus-wide interdisciplinary activities, and to identify promising areas of physiological research and the faculty expertise and facilities needed to explore these areas. Creative planning and leadership are essential to maintain and foster excellence in physiological research. These and related functions are served by the Committee on Physiological Sciences and its Executive Committee. In the following sections the By-laws that govern policies and operating procedures are outlined. Activities of the Physiological Sciences Program are administered by the Executive Committee whose Chairperson shall also serve as Chairperson of the Committee on Physiological Sciences.

Chairperson of the Committee on Physiological Sciences 1. The Chairperson of the Committee will be appointed to a five year term by Director of Graduate Interdisciplinary Programs from a nominee submitted by the Executive Committee. If the nominee is currently a member of the Executive Committee, the allowable tenure as a member of this committee ordinarily three years; see below will be extended to a maximum of eight years. The Chairperson nominee will be selected by the Executive Committee in a closed session, with advisory votes to be provided to the Executive Committee by the program faculty and the students before the decision process. In cases where there is a potential conflict of interest on the part of an Executive Committee member, including being the spouse of a candidate or a graduate student in the laboratory of a candidate, that member will be excused from the decision process. Any member of the Executive Committee who is excused from participating in the selection due to potential conflicts of interest will be replaced by another representative. The replacement is temporary, and sustained only for the immediate process of discussion and selection of the next Chairperson nominee. The absent member will be replaced by another member of the Physiological Sciences Program, according to the following hierarchical order. If the person qualified to be appointed as a substitute has a conflict of interest, or is currently appointed to the Executive Committee, then the replacement will be determined by the next option in the series. The former Chair of the same Committee in the Physiological Sciences program. The senior faculty member of the same current Committee, with seniority determined from combined years of service in that position and in other Committees of the Physiological Sciences program. The former student representative to the Executive Committee. The senior student representative from all the current Committees, with seniority determined from combined years of service in that position and in other Committees of the Physiological Sciences program. The duties of the Chairperson of the Committee are: The Executive Committee will consist of seven faculty members representing the major areas of Physiological Sciences and one graduate student. Five of the faculty members will represent the standing committees ordinarily the Chair of the standing committee; see below and a seventh will serve as the "member at large". Faculty members of the Executive Committee will be appointed only from the members of the Committee on Physiological Sciences. Each Executive Committee member will serve a three-year term, and the terms will be staggered so that at least two members of the Executive Committee are replaced each year. New members of the Executive Committee will be appointed each year by the Dean of the Graduate College from nominations submitted by the Executive Committee. The graduate student member will be elected annually by the students in good academic standing in the Program. Outgoing members of the Executive Committee are not eligible for reappointment to the Executive Committee until one year after the termination of the previous appointment. The Executive Committee is responsible for administering the graduate program in Physiological Sciences, including admission of graduate students, evaluation of continuing graduate students, publicizing the Physiological Sciences program intra- and extramurally, planning the development of the Physiological Sciences Program, formulating the annual budget of the Committee on Physiological Sciences, securing and allocating necessary funding, and advising the Dean of the Graduate College and Vice-President for Research on issues pertinent to Physiological Sciences. At least one member of the Recruiting and Admissions Committee shall be from the Executive Committee. The Recruiting and Admissions Committee shall be responsible for publicizing the program, developing an active minority recruitment plan, evaluating applicants, and recommending admission of qualified candidates to the Executive Committee. At its discretion, the Recruiting and Admissions Committee may ask a postdoctoral trainee to assist in its work. At least one member of the Program Committee shall be from the Executive Committee. The Program Committee shall be responsible for curriculum and course development, maintaining the Student Handbook, suggesting potential advisors to students, evaluation of graduate student progress including an annual evaluation of the yearly progress reports from the students and their mentors, mediation of the concerns and grievances of the graduate student. The Program Committee shall prepare a report on graduate student progress and submit the report by June 1 of each year to the Executive Committee. At least one member of the Resources Committee shall be from the Executive Committee. The Resources Committee shall be responsible for developing and implementing the overall financial plan for Physiological Sciences including extramural fund raising for Program activities, identifying funding opportunities and advising students on predoctoral awards and applying for fellowships and scholarships from the Graduate College. The graduate student member will be elected annually by the students in good academic standing in the Program. At least one member of the Activities Committee shall be from the Executive Committee. The Activities Committee shall be responsible for organizing educational and social events that promote interactions among the members of the Physiological Sciences Program. These activities shall include at least one picnic at the beginning of each academic year, supervision of Student Forum, at least one annual poster session, and a Program Newsletter. The graduate student member will be elected annually by the students and must be in good academic standing in the Program. At least one member of the Teaching Committee shall be from the Executive Committee. The Teaching Committee shall be responsible for assigning teaching responsibilities to all students who have completed their first year, taking into account preferences of course coordinators and students. Assignments shall be distributed among students in as equitable manner as possible, individual teaching loads being averaged over the year. A description of the responsibilities for several of the courses in which Physiological Sciences graduate students gain teaching experience follows. The Teaching Committee shall also be responsible for ensuring that all students receive an evaluation of their teaching abilities both from the students that they teach and from a faculty member Article III. Membership in the Committee on Physiological Sciences The Committee on Physiological Sciences consists of tenured or tenure-eligible faculty members at the University of Arizona who participate in graduate education and research in Physiological Sciences. An affiliate membership is available to non-tenure-eligible faculty. Faculty tenure-eligible only shall be nominated for membership in the Committee on Physiological Sciences by submitting a request for membership and a recent curriculum vitae to the Executive Committee. Criteria for membership shall include demonstrated research activity, interest in graduate education, and resources for graduate training. Membership shall be subject to periodic review and failure to satisfy those criteria as decided by a two-thirds majority of the Executive Committee shall result in loss of membership. Members dropped from membership may reapply for membership as specified in Article. Members of the Committee on Physiological Sciences may serve as academic and research advisors of graduate students in the program and as members of graduate and other committees. Members of the Committee on Physiological Sciences shall meet annually and as needed. Failing a quorum, a mail note shall be required. Members shall be expected to share in the financial support of graduate students at a level determined by the Executive Committee. Non-tenure-eligible faculty who otherwise meet the criteria for membership Art. Affiliate members shall have all the privileges and responsibilities of regular members Art. Amendments The By-laws shall be amended or revised by movement of the Executive Committee and a two-thirds positive vote of the Committee on Physiological Sciences.

Chapter 3 : Stephen H Confer () - Find A Grave Memorial

We do not have any photo volunteers within fifty miles of your requested photo location. You can still file a request but no one will be notified. If a new volunteer signs up in your requested photo location, they may see your existing request and take the photo.

Chapter 4 : The Resilience Project - Wikipedia

Download Citation on ResearchGate | On Sep 19, , Alicia Prieto-Sanchez and others published Training plan for volunteers in H&S }.

Chapter 5 : Wilson Holdren Confer () - Find A Grave Memorial

A Strategic Approach to Volunteer Management: Stephen H. Velez-Confer This participative workshop will focus on how volunteer management is part of the strategic positioning of the nonprofit. There will be a maximum opportunity for the participants to discuss volunteer management as strategic positioning.

Chapter 6 : South Jersey Industries Press Releases | South Jersey Industries

Stephen H. Savage, page 3 PUBLICATIONS, continued: "On-Site Digital Archaeology and Cyber-Archaeology: Into the Future of the Past - New Developments, Delivery and the Creation of a Data Avalanche."

Chapter 7 : Alfred M. Freudenthal Medal | ASCE | Past Award Winners

A new training report for position-specific training is now available in theinnatdunvilla.comng. The new report will provide the unit-level and training volunteers quick and accurate data regarding the adult leader training for a specific unit, district, or council.

Chapter 8 : Norman Medal | ASCE | Past Award Winners

Ove Ditlevsen, Ph.D., theinnatdunvilla.com Mircea D. Grigoriu. Loren D. Lutes. Vladimir V. Bolotin. Stephen H. Crandall. Thomas Caughey.