Texas Last night, I was thinking about what other person connected to my family might have served in the Civil War. My old mind took me back to my youth. I remembered my dad telling me there was an old Confederate monument which leaned against a barn for many years until someone threw it in a stock pond. My dad told me he thought the monument was Confederate and belonged to someone in the Sparks family. I decided to check with Ancestry. As luck would have it, I found Samuel J. Sparks enlisted in Co. Samuel was transferred on Sept. He surrendered at Citronelle, Alabama on May 4, On a sheet of paper with a picture of a man holding eggs and with a heading of "Jon. He went on to explain that during his interrogation he said his regiment was cavalry and that was correct to the Legion, but the 14th Arkansas Regiment was infantry and noted a Colonel Walls made up the Second Legion. Colonel Whitfield was transferred and Colonel Hawkins took command of the regiment. I read there was only a handful of officers and men left at the time of the surrender. My mother told me Claud C. Sparks had Indian blood and if you gave him a penny, he could cure a wart. Sparks and his mother was Elizabeth Mitchel. The informant was his son was Claud Glen Sparks. From what I gathered from my mother was that Claud Glen Sparks was considered "odd" by the farmers in my family. My grandfather said that "Claud Glen Sparks was not very smart. He knew nothing of farming. She told me that Claud Glen Sparks was on a ship off the shore of Normandy at the time of the invasion.
