Chapter 5 : Wise Quotes about Life Lesson

The real lessons from the book of life are inscribed in a corner of the margin. - Jonathan Lockwood Huie. It is a man's own mind, not his enemy or foe.

The greatest deception men suffer is from their own opinions. Silence is full of answers. You wanna fly, you got to give up the shit that weighs you down. Toni Morrison Let us temper our criticism with kindness. None of us comes fully equipped. Carl Sagan You have power over your mind – not outside events. Realize this, and you will find strength. Marcus Aurelius, Meditations Just remember who was by your side when everyone else left. Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere. We are caught in an inescapable network of mutuality. Whatever affects one directly, affects all indirectly. Martin Luther King, Jr. Loving life is easy when you are abroad. Where no one knows you and you hold your life in your hands all alone, you are more master of yourself than at any other time. Hannah Arendt Man cannot be free if he does not know that he is subject to necessity because his freedom is always won in his never wholly successful attempts to liberate himself from necessity. Hannah Arendt Plunge ahead and see what your passion can reveal. Ray Bradbury Art, in reality, is alternative medicine. Where wisdom reigns there is no conflict between thinking and feeling. Jung There is no coming to consciousness without pain. Jung Storytelling reveals meanings without committing the crime of defining it. Hannah Arendt The life that I could still live, I should live, and the thoughts that I could still think, I should think. Jung The meeting of two personalities is like the contact of two chemical substances: Jung There is need of a method for finding out the truth. Descartes Tolerance becomes a crime when applied to evil. Light does not stay. The tender things are those we fold away. Who looks outside, dreams; who looks inside, awakes. Jung You may also like:

I think the purpose of life is to be useful, to be responsible, to be compassionate. It is, above all, to matter and to count, to stand for something, to have made some difference that you lived at all.

Feel free to skip the introduction by clicking on this interlink: Personally, I associate intelligence not only with the utilization of knowledge to find solutions to tricky problems but also with the capacity for abstract thought or the comprehension of complex issues. Wisdom, on the other hand, appears to be entirely different than everything intelligence stands for. It is much more intuitive, rather than based on pure logic as intelligence mostly is. During my life, I had the very honorable experience of getting in touch with a huge variety of people, from all different kinds of backgrounds. But many "if not most" of the wisdom and lessons I would like to share with you came from my personal experience, for instance from the time when my life was hanging by a thread the time I had hit rock bottom. Lessons that life teaches us I am, however, not perfect and all-knowing, which is why I would like to invite you to share your wisdom in the comment section below. I will integrate your statement into this article when time permits. Solomon Ibn Gabriol The first step in the acquisition of wisdom is silence, the second listening, the third memory, the fourth practice, the fifth teaching others. Solomon Ibn Gabriol Before we get to the interesting part of this article, I think it might be helpful to define what wisdom really is. Wisdom is also the comprehension of what is true or right coupled with optimum judgment as to action. The intelligent can learn, comprehend, understand and meet rational decisions based on logic. A wise person knows out of experience. It is the inner knowing what to do in a given situation. In some cases, the decision that is met appears to be irrational, but more often than not it turns out to be the right thing to do. The wise person knows from within, supported by the insights gained from a reflective disposition. Wisdom of Life 11 Wise Lessons about life and the essential wisdom to be prepared for life. What is important to you in life? Maybe you have already a definite answer to the question in which case I would like to congratulate you. In every rill a sweet instruction flows. Edward Young Everything you undergo teaches you a lesson. Do you have the courage to discover what lesson was taught? Are you brave enough to make use of the wisdom you gained? Life can be really tough, especially in times of coping with setbacks and failures. But I know from experience: Often, it took me months to let go of the ego-based grief, self-pity, and anger about what had happened. But once that work was done it gave way to a reflective approach to discovering the valuable insights and wisdom that were taught. Remember that this process takes a lot of time. Wise lessons might not immediately catch your attention, but they will come as very profound realizations once you are ready to comprehend them. With the insight that time provides, you will be able to accept the situation and be courageous enough to let go of anger and bitterness. Only then, with an impartial point of view, profound but wise lessons can be drawn from the things that happened to you, hence increasing your knowledge about the important wisdom about life. Abraham Lincoln No one is in charge of your happiness but you. No one has the responsibility to make you happy. It is a very common misconception to believe things that lie outside of ourselves can make us happy. If you ask an unhappy person what it would take to make them happier, they will most likely enumerate the many material things that lie beyond their grasp. What they do not realize is the profound wisdom that true happiness comes from within. People think abundance can make them happy. We associate the possession of luxurious cars, big mansions and the many other tangibles this materialistic world has to offer with happiness. But the reality is: It is the wisdom that comes from personal experience that has shown many people that one will never be fully satisfied by the accumulation of fancy tangibles. If you make your happiness dependent on external influences, you set up a barrier that prevents you from discovering the happiness that lies within you. In such a case, you would be trying to fill an emptiness within you that cannot be filled with things from the outside. Buddha Anger is destructive in nature. It makes people forget all the good qualities that characterize them as human beings. Anger turns people into instinct driven animals that are blinded by their aggression. And in this state of being it so happens that we tend to do evil things we painfully regret later. Retrospectively I would say that by holding on to anger, I harmed myself the most. The very wise lesson stated by Buddha brings it to the point:

Your anger and hatred will hurt you the most, which is quite an important wisdom for life, I think. Thomas Szasz Forgiveness is the characteristic of the strong. It really takes a lot of strength to forgive and to let go of the hurt. The alternative to forgiving is vengeance, but it will not help you to reduce the pain. Revenge "to me" is simply not the right way to let go of the emotional baggage I carry around when someone hurt me. The process of forgiving is essential to be able to let go of the hurt. Forgiveness can set you free. It can help you in releasing the built-up resentment and the emotional baggage you carry around. Life is too short to waste your time with hatred. We are afraid of failure when in reality the regret about not having tried can be by far more painful than failure in itself. To me, failure is an inevitable aspect of my life. With it comes the realization and wisdom that the only fool-proof way to avoid any kind of failure is to not try at all. The attempt to avoid failure at any cost "by not trying" is an irreversible mistake, which I regard as the worst failure of all. The most common regrets of the dying: Ann Radcliffe I think most of us will agree that money is essential to survive in this modern world. It takes no wisdom or really wise lesson to realize that. We all need enough money to support our living, to afford housing and to feed our families. The question is, do you really want to coordinate your whole life to the one and only goal of acquiring as much money as possible? Money is nothing more than a lot of coins and notes with numbers on. Money is a means to an end, not an end in itself. When someone did something very stupid, you can bet that I got a lecture about it as well. Nowadays, I know better of course. Lao Tzu What other people think of you should be none of your business. Everyone is entitled to his own opinion and you cannot change what others think of you anyways. Take notice of criticism and be thankful for feedback, but think about how much emphasis you want to put onto what other people think of you. The moment you begin to bend over backward for others, by trying to please everyone, you will lose much of your integrity; it will figuratively break your spine. You can put a mask on in order to influence what other people think about you, but sooner or later, though, they will get a glimpse of what lies behind. Stay true to yourself and there is nothing for you to regret. Another wise lesson I had to learn the hard way is that every person is on a different journey "in terms of their personal and spiritual development but also in regards to the level of knowledge and wisdom they have acquired so far. With this wisdom comes the realization that you will not be able to force them to go down a specific path. William Hazlitt People externalize because they have no trust in themselves. Instead of taking responsibility by taking action they wait for someone else to do it for them. Develop a healthy trust in yourself and take responsibility for your life, if you do not want to make your whole life dependent on others. People seek for answers to their inexplicable questions outside of themselves, when in reality they can find all the answers within themselves and might already know the answers to some of these questions. Get to know who you really are and practice the skill of listening to your intuition, or as many term it: The purpose of your life might have a lot do to with your passions, and if you seek for the works where you put your whole heart into, you might find some important hints as to what your purpose could be. John Wooden There are elements in our lives that we can neither change nor influence. And with this realization comes the wise lesson that you may not be able to change certain aspects of your life, but you can always make the best of it. All it takes is acceptance about the situation you find yourself in and the courage to discover the new opportunities that present themselves.
